Campaign For Rubber Scrap Starts With a Will

First-Day Response Heartens Officials; Drive Turns Up Freak Articles

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

The Japs may have taken the rubber trees.

But yesterday a legion of Americans took the baby's rubber teething ring, the tire rim from Dad's ash tray, the elastic from somebody's old bloomers, and everything else in the house that stretched, and gave it to Uncle Sam with a hope that he'll soon ride back where the rubber trees grow.

The opening day of the two-week attic-garret-backyard Nation-wide search for scrap rubber to relieve America's depleted stocks in a modern war where victory rides on rubber rather than on spears, appeared to have produced thousands of tons, nationally. The contributions took fantastic shapes and the contributors here—in the main—didn't want the penny a pound. This was reported by many receiving places. Generally they asked that the proceeds be given to some responsible war relief activity.

D. C. Supports Drive

As an impression of the salvage being thrown into the war effort, Jimmy Lockhead, an assistant deputy warden for salvage, said yesterday at his depot at the rear of 333 G Street Southwest that he had lifted over 100,000 pounds of salvage since February. And yesterday three truck loads of rubber galoshes were sent him from the Sports Center, while other vehicles brought over 800 pounds of old rubber heels. He stood on a pile of rubber gloves, syringes, rubber dogs and cats, bottles, aprons and garters to talk of it, and perspire.

The District's fifty-third traffic fatality of the year was recorded late yesterday as James McKenney, 18, of 2401 Thirtieth Street Northwest died at Emeregency Hospital shortly after being struck by a northbound streetcar on Fourteenth Street just south of Thomas Circle.

Police quoted witnesses as saying that when the accident occurred, McKenney was running across the street in an attempt to get clear of the approaching car. He suffered a skull fracture and lacerations of the face and body.

The trolley's motorman, police said, was Samuel Misenko, 27, of 3703 Thirty-sixth Street, Mount Rainier, Md. He was arrested pending action of the coroner and released in the custody of his employers, the Capital Transit Co.

Meanwhile, the condition of Frank Dillon, 16, of 6432 Second Place Northwest, whose skull was fractured in a collision between two cars Saturday night at Bradley Boulevard and Wilson Lane, Bethesda, remained critical, Georgetown University Hospital attaches said he had not regained consciousness since being admitted to the hospital shortly after the accident.

Shirt-Sleeves Interview

Steve Vasilakos Sizes Up Greek King as 'A Good Boy'

But President Still Rates First With White House Peanut Vendor

By Jackson S. Elliott
International News Service Staff Writer

The monarch of a fallen nation and a peanut vendor met yesterday by an arrangement made by the White House.

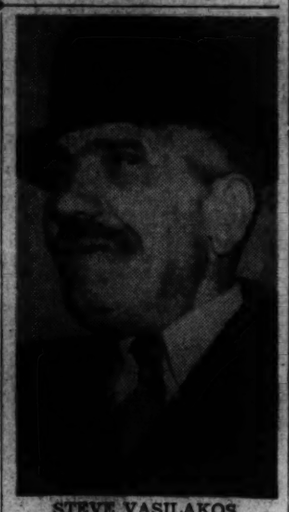

The ruler was King George of Greece, and the peanut vendor, Steve Vasilakos, who has sold his wares to many Presidents from his stand near the Executive Mansion.

With his shirtsleeves rolled up above his chunky elbows, Vasilakos shook hands with King George, and the heartiness of the handshake set to trembling the General MacArthur button pinned to the vendor's red-white-and-blue necktie.

It was a delayed interview, as Vasilakos explained afterward. The native Greek, who became a citizen of the United States only two years ago, said that President Roosevelt had asked King George to see Vasilakos.

"The King tried to see me several times," said the vendor, whose diction is near-perfect English after 35 years in this country.

"But I was so busy with customers that I could only exchange a casual 'hello' with him. His last visit to my place of business occurred yesterday, and I was then informed that he would see me at Blair House this morning."

The interview was brief, but King George got it off to a good start with the question that strikes a responsive chord in the heart of every salesman.

Gripping the hand of the vendor, the ruler inquired:

Medical Units Lose Antitrust Case Appeal

Restraint of Trade Ruling Upheld Against A. M. A., District Society

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The United States Court of Appeals here yesterday affirmed the conviction of the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society for conspiracy to restrain trade.

The two organizations were found guilty of violating the antitrust laws in their campaign against Group Health Association—the cooperative which undertook to supply medical and hospital services to Government workers in return for a fixed monthly fee.

The court's decision went far beyond the narrow question of whether two organizations convicted of violating a penal statute should pay the relatively small fines imposed by Justice James M. Proctor of the District Court—$2500 for A. M. A. and $1500 for the District society. The justices mentioned only briefly the strictly legal questions and pronounced broad doctrines of public policy.

Spokesmen of the medical societies announced promptly that these principles will be subjected to the test of Supreme Court review.

The setting up of Group Health Association in Washington several years ago provoked the opposition of the organized medical professionsion, which invoked such sanctions as expulsion of co-op physicians, pressure upon hospitals to

Senate Defers Vote on Police, Fire Pay Raise

Ten District Bills Pass, Including Lethal Gas Measure

The Senate yesterday passed ten District of Columbia bills and deferred action on three others, including the measure to raise salaries of policemen and firemen.

Four of the bills must yet have House action. They provide that lethal gas replace the electric chair as the mode of capital punishment in Washington, that the rank of corporal be created in the Metropolitan Police Force, that a memorial to George Earle Chamberlain be placed in Gallinger Hospital, and that custodial employes of the public schools be paid for extra work growing out of extra use of schools for war programs.

Five are ready for the President's signature. They provide that the Commissioners may assign members and officers of the Metropolitan Police force to duty in the detective bureau, that firms making sales consummated outside the District are not subject to the 5 per cent business transaction tax, that Dr. Wesley K. Harris be given a license to practice chiropractory, that Joseph Sharfsin be provided additional compensation for legal services to the District, and that a $25 license fee be charged for ambulances and funeral cars.

The tenth bill, to change length of the work year for custodial employes of the public schools, must go to conference for agreement on amendments.

Defense Chiefs Polish Details For All-Night Blackout Test

Auxiliary police wardens and firemen will be on duty all night tomorrow to protect the District during its first all night blackout. They will be assigned to duty on short shifts, so that the city will be adequately covered yet no one will lose a whole night's sleep.

Police Chief Edward Kelly will meet with his captains at 10 a. m. today to give final instructions on the duties of the regular police, who also will be on staggered hours during the blackout. It is intended that the auxiliary police work directly with the regular police in the all-night beats.

The chiefs of the protective services will meet with Coordinator John Russell Young at the same hour today to lay final plans for other angles of tomorrow's test.

There will be no official signal for the beginning of the blackout tomorrow night at 10 o'clock. Civilians are expected to black out their houses when the hour strikes. Either they should set an alarm clock for that time or listen to the radio or watch for the street lights to go out.

There is no specified time for the blackout to be over. The street

WLB Orders Textile Strike Be Broken

Employment Service Told to Replace 125 Defiant Workers At Fall River Mill

The War Labor Board last night undertook to replace 125 strikers whose walkout has kept hundreds of men idle at the Arkwright Corp. textile mill at Fall River, Mass., and who have defied the board's order to return to work.

Notified that the strikers at a meeting yesterday had refused to resume work, Chairman William H. Davis of the WLB wired John J. Corson, director of the United States Employment Service:

"Fixers and changers at Arkwright Corp. have failed to end strike in accordance with National War Labor Board requests. Under circumstances would direct you proceed at once to direct the manager of your Fall River, Mass., office to secure necessary replacements, as previously arranged."

It was the first time the board had been required to take such action upon defiance of one of its orders.

Davis, in individual telegrams to the strikers Saturday, said the board has before it a request for a general wage increase from the C. I. O. United Textile Workers, which, if granted, would be extended to the jobs held by the strikers.

The strike was repudiated by the American Federation of Textile Operatives (independent), to which most of the workers belong.

Telegram an "Insult"

Fall River, Mass., June 15 (AP).—Striking loom fixers and changers of the Arkwright Corp. mill today defied a War Labor Board order that they return to work immediately or face the loss of their jobs.

Asserting that they were insulted by telegrams sent to each striker by the War Labor Board, spokesmen for the strikers contended that they were not disloyal or unpatriotic.

"We are just as patriotic as anyone in this country," the strikers said in a statement issued by Chairman J. George Burgo of their pub-

Black Sea Fleet Joins in Defense Of Sevastopol, Blunts Nazi Push

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Tuesday), June 16. Russian defenders smashed 180 German tanks and thwarted enemy assaults in a great and continuing battle on the Kharkov front yesterday while Sevastopol's stalwart defense stiffened appreciably with the help of the thundering guns of the Black Sea fleet, the Russians reported today.

The massive clash of men and machines in the Kharkov area was reported in the midnight Soviet communique after earlier accounts had indicated a momentary lull in the furious German offensive there.

Before beleaguered Sevastopol in the Crimea the official announcement said only that fierce battles continued, indicating that the fleet's participation in the battle for the Black Sea naval base had blunted the mounting German attacks there.

Gliders Reported Used

[Unable to crack Sevastopol's defenses by infantry, artillery and dive bombing assaults, the Germans were reported to have resorted to large-scale use of gliders for the first time since their invasion of more than a year ago, an International News Service dispatch said. In a Tuesday morning broadcast, the Moscow radio was quoted by the London Daily Express as saying the Nazis were attempting to land troops by gliders behind the Soviet lines defending Sevastopol. The broadcast said 128 Germa planes and "many gliders" were destroyed over the area in the last few days.]

Murmansk Attacked

On the Kalinin Front northwest of Moscow, where sharp fighting on a local scale has been in progress for days, the Russians reported German tanks and infantry engaged positions held by a single Red army unit but were thrown back after losing four tanks and a large number of men killed and wounded. The communique indicated this local engagement took place Sunday.

Elsewhere the communique said there were no significant changes. However, sharp local actions in many sectors promised soon to set the whole vast battlefront aflame.

The communique credited the Soviet air force with destroying or damaging 64 German tanks in vari-

Three Warships Sunk, Five Heavily Damaged, Rome Report Says

By the Associated Press

Rome (From Italian Broadcasts), June 15.—A violent battle raged through its second day in the Mediterranean today as Italian warplanes pounced upon "remaining enemy units" of one of two huge British convoys which the high command declared had already lost two escorting cruisers and a destroyer and suffered great damage to an aircraft carrier, a battleship and three other warships in an effort to break through from the Atlantic.

(British quarters in London had no comment to make on the report, which so far had come entirely from Axis sources.)

The convoy, declared by the newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia to be the biggest ever sent into the Mediterranean by Britain and said to consist of about 30 units—a battleship, two aircraft carriers, four cruisers, 10 destroyers and 12 to 14

Tommies Savagely Counterattacking To Save Key Post

By the Associated Press

Cairo, June 15.—The British Eighth Army was fighting in a bitter and fluid melee of destruction tonight to save part of its desert forces from isolation and annihilation by Axis tank columns which threatened hourly to smother important units entrenched west of Tobruk.

(The Italian high command, in a special communique, claimed the Axis columns, driving northward behind the outflanked British advanced line, had reached the coast north of Acroma, encircling British forces to the west around Ain El Gazala, which was the northern end of a semifortified Allied line extending southward to Bir Hacheim. Bir Hacheim, the southern anchor of the line, fell last week.

(The Italian announcement said the Axis columns had crossed the "Via Balbo," coastal highway north of Acroma. A German communique said 52 British tanks had been de-

Allies to Share War Cost on Ability to Pay

Lend-Lease Reaches 4½-Billion Total, Roosevelt Reports

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Staff Writer

The financial cost of the war will be shared by the United Nations according to their ability to pay, Congress was told yesterday in a Presidential report which disclosed that lend-lease aid had reached nearly $4,500,000,000 by the end of May.

This distribution of cost would be attained, the fifth quarterly report said, "if each country devotes roughly the same fraction of its national production to the war."

The document indicated that if the United States converted 50 per cent of her vast production to war purposes, she would call it square, so far as lend-lease is concerned, with any other United Nation which converted a similar portion of production. Neither the volume of output nor the dollar value would be the governing factor.

No Nation Will Wax Rich

"Such a distribution of the financial cost of war means that no nation will grow rich from the war effort of its allies," the report said. "The money cost of the war will fall according to the rule of equality in sacrifice as in effort."

The United States intends, the report declared, to avoid "the political and economic mistakes of international debt experienced during the twenties."

It spoke of hopes that plans would develop soon for "a series of agreements and recommendations for legislation in the fields of commercial policy, of money and finance, international investment and reconstruction."

Japs Converge On Chinese Rail Junction

2 Powerful Columns Reported Within 75 Or 100 Miles of Center

By the Associated Press

Chungking, June 15.—Two powerful Japanese columns, applying a nutcracker squeeze on the ill-equipped Chinese troops in Chekiang and Kiangsi provinces, had driven tonight to within 75 or 100 miles of a junction on the vital Nanchang-Hangchow Railway.

One column of perhaps 50,000 men, which overran northern Chekiang Province south of Shanghai last month, has made steady progress into bordering Kiangsi Province, a Chinese communique acknowledged.

"Heavy fighting is in progress on the Chekiang-Kiangsi border in the areas south of Kiangshan, southwest of Yushan, and at the outskirts of Kwangfeng," the communique said. Street fighting, in which both sides suffered heavy casualties, was said to be raging within Kwangfeng, which the Japanese entered Saturday night.

Another column believed to be of about equal strength has driven southeast from Nanchang, Japan's Kiangsi base, at least as far as Tengpu, 100 miles from Nanchang and about the same distance from Kwangfeng.

Tonight's communique reported a further advance for this column. After failing Friday and Saturday in attempts to cross a river at Tengpu (Tengchiatu), it said, the Japanese made their crossing Sunday and advanced several miles eastward to a point where they ran into determined Chinese and heavy fighting followed.

(The Japanese today asserted their westbound column had occupied Shangjao, 25 miles west of Kwangfeng. If true, this would narrow the gap between the Japanese columns to less than 75 miles.)

Arnold Reports Nip Cruiser Sunk In Smashing Series of Blows

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy last night announced the damaging of six ships of the Japanese invasion force in the Aleutian Islands, while Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Forces, reported that one enemy cruiser had been sunk and an aircraft carrier damaged in that area.

The Navy's communique listed the warships hit by our bombers or torpedo planes as three cruisers, a destroyer, a transport and a gunboat. Some of them were damaged "severely," it stated.

Attacks on the Japanese forces, which have made landings on Attu, westernmost of the Aleutian chain, are "continuing," but the "general situation" there remains unchanged, the Navy said.

Arnold Message Unverified

Shortly before the Navy's announcement, the Glenn L. Martin Co. made public in Baltimore a telegram from Gen. Arnold reporting that Martin B-26 planes had sunk a Jap cruiser and dropped a torpedo on the deck of an aircraft carrier in the Aleutian fighting.

There was no official verification of this report from either the War or Navy Departments, but a Navy spokesman said, in issuing the communique, that the latter contained "all of the accurate information available at this time."

The telegram from General Arnold to the aircraft company praised the "magnificent part" played by Martin bombers in the "recent successes off Midway and the Aleutian Islands."

"In the Aleutian Islands," said the telegram, "a group of B-26s made three attacks on the main Japanese force, sinking a cruiser and scoring two hits with torpedoes, besides dropping a torpedo on the deck of a carrier."

Hampered by Weather

The Navy communique declared that "foul weather and fog" were hampering both the attacks on the Japanese invasion forces in the western Aleutians and the reconnaissance of damage done.

"But reports to date," it added, "indicate that at least three cruisers, one destroyer, one gunboat and one transport have been damaged, some of them severely."

The Navy's announcement was the first word of developments in the far Aleutian sector since Friday. Then the Navy Department reported that small-scale landings had been made by the Japs on Attu Island and that enemy warships were in Kiska Harbor, in the Rat Islands, close to Attu.

United States Army and Navy planes were attacking the invaders, it was then said, and drove them from the inhabited sections of the remote islands. Enemy operations

Rep. Oliver Beaten For Renomination In Maine Primary

Portland, Me., June 15 (AP).—United States Representative James C. Oliver, acknowledged isolationist, lost his fight for Republican renomination tonight to Robert Hale, Portland lawyer and advocate of the Roosevelt Administration foreign policies, in Maine's primary election.

Former Gov. Louis J. Brann held an insurmountable lead over Ray W. Stetson of Portland for the democratic nomination to oppose Hale in the September election.

Unofficial tabulation of the vote in 125 out of 151 precincts gave Hale, 9432; Oliver, 5097; Brann, 1[illegible]; Stetson, 356.

Coral Sea Target

Jap Carrier Blasted to Bits By 19 Bombs, 12 Torpedoes

This is the fourth of nine stories supplied to the Associated Press by the Chicago Tribune whose correspondent, Stanley Johnston, was the only American newspaperman aboard the aircraft carrier Lexington in the Coral Sea engagement. In the preceding stories Johnston told of heavy losses inflicted on the Japanese, of the Lexington's destruction several hours after it had beaten off Jap attacks, and of the devastating American air attack on enemy ship concentrations in the Harbor of Tulagi, capital of the Solomon Islands. This latter action he described as the curtain-raiser to the Coral Sea fight.

By Stanley Johnston
Copyright, 1942, by the Chicago Tribune

Chicago, June 15.—A pillar of flame and smoke—the funeral pyre of 12 Japanese airmen—opened the second stage of the epic five-day Coral Sea battle. This was one of the unforgettable sights I saw during the tense moments of this, the first of the world's fights between modern aircraft carrier forces.

It was awful, majestic and a threat of what was ahead for all of us, for the big Nipponese patrol plane that burned there so fiercely in the sky and on the sea, fell right into the heart of our speeding two carrier task force.

Our fighter planes, patrolling in pairs, found the Jap—a Kawanishi four-engined long-range flying boat with a 132-foot wing span—lurking in the cloud layer that covered us at the 8000-foot level. The plane was first seen right over the Lexington, which was in the center of our protective cruiser and destroyer screen.

Lieut. Comdr. Jorgensen, leader of the patrol then in the air, called to us on the signal bridge over the fighter radio circuit:

"Tally-ho a plane. Kawanishi at 8500 feet, right over you."

His voice died away, then came in strongly from the loud speakers that carried its sound to every part of the great 880-foot vessel. He said:

"Wait a minute and I'll show him to you."

All of us who could rushed to scan the sky. We saw only the clouds for a moment, then a glow showed through. Out of the cloud vapor less than a mile away popped the huge Jap plane, afire and spinning madly in an uncontrolled descent. This ship was larger than the Pan American Airways Martin transoceanic air liners, but it spun exactly like the small German fighters and bombers I'd seen shot down over England two years ago.

The flame, barely visible at first, bloomed, swiftly. The turning wreckage crashed into the water. The fire turned to thick black smoke. Jorgensen called his shots for the whole fleet to see and delivered as he promised.

All this was just an incident in the broader battle picture. It happened the morning of May 7 while 76 planes from our nest were in the air speeding toward a Japanese carrier force that had been located at dawn 175 miles northeast of us. Jorgensen's feat served to ease momentarily the preaction tension that

Subs Get Five More Ships In Atlantic and Gulf Attacks

By the Associated Press

Deadly Axis U-boats have crept back into the Gulf of Mexico, free from the underwater raiders for two weeks, the Navy reported last night in announcing the sinking of a large Panamanian merchant vessel.

Blasting of this ship and four others elsewhere boosted the announced sinkings in the Atlantic and adjacent waters to 270 since Pearl Harbor.

The other four ships torpedoed were an American merchantman, a small United States merchant vessel, the Norwegian tanker South Africa and an unidentified craft. At least 188 seamen were rescued from these four and the Panamanian merchantman and at least nine were killed.

Only one life was lost when a submarine sank the ship in the gulf June 11 and 58 sailors were saved. Survivors reported two quick torpedoes caused the ship to list so badly that its deck gunners were unable to fire.

After a submarine sank the small U. S. merchantman off the South coast of Cuba June 7, one of the U-boat crewmen dove into the water and picked up a life preserver to establish the identity of the victim. The torpedoing cost six lives and 27

Hitler's Twin Drive Aims at Caucasus Oil

Campaigns in Libya, Ukraine Form Great Pincer Movement

By Drew Middleton

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 15.—On battlefields 1500 miles apart Adolf Hitler's armies smashed across the sands of North Africa and Russia's wreckage-closing a vast pincers about the littered Ukraine tonight in a supreme effort aimed eventually at coveted oil fields of the Middle East for which his need grows daily.

These coordinated thrusts toward the great land bridge between the Caucasus and Suez, an area producing a seventh of the world's petroleum supply, appeared to be the opening phases of a campaign on which Hitler is expected to gamble everything for victory in 1942.

In the Libyan battle, on which hangs the fate of Egypt, the Germans were hammering at the approaches to Tobruk and the Italians claimed they had smashed through to the Mediterranean to isolate South Africans west of Ain El Gazala, plainly a dangerous threat to the Allies.

48 Hours May Tell Tale

Some London quarters held that the outcome of the campaign depended on developments of the next 48 hours. The capture of Tobruk is part of the German plan which aims at a descent into Egypt and a northeastern drive on Iraq. Without possession of Tobruk as well as Bengasi, a port which the Germans now hold, such an advance would be impossible.

Far to the north, German forces in the Ukraine hurled themselves at Soviet lines in the first of two anticipated thrusts toward Stalingrad and the approaches to the Caucasus.

Military experts here declared that a German blow through Turkey to supplemept offensives already under way now was unlikely.

"There are no German troops massing on the Turkish frontier or in the Balkans," said one informant. "There is some evidence that Hitler contemplated this move but demands on his man power and machines made by the Russian and Libyan fronts made it impossible."

But, this source said, failure on the Russian front may yet force the Germans to attempt a move through Turkey.

"This would be a much more difficult operation than a year ago," he added, "for the Germans would encounter a re-equipped Turkish army and the British armies in Syria would come to Turkey's aid."

Old Timing Gone

Experts here declared the present Nazi offensives lacked the precise timing of German campaigns of 1940 and 1941. Russian Marshal Timoshenko's May offensive against Kharkov was credited with upsetting Hitler's plan for simultaneous advances in Libya and the Ukraine.

A general offensive on Russia's southern front is expected to strike across the Donets and Don Rivers toward Stalingrad with the two main spearheads launched from Kharkov and Taganrog, farther south on the Sea of Azov. These may be accompanied by a secondary thrust from the Kerch Peninsula.

Although Sevastopol still has not been reduced, it was believed in London that Hitler dare not wait longer for its capture before opening his massive campaign. The beleaguered Black Sea naval base was considered useless, however, as a base for a Russian attack on the German flank.

Gandhi Maps Anti-British Movement

By Preston Grover

Wide World Staff Writer

Wardha, India, June 15.—Mohandas K. Gandhi declared today he soon would launch a movement against British rule in India that "will be felt by the whole world."

He made the statement in an interview in a little whitewashed room in this southern India town near which he lives on a sort of ranch surrounded by a colony of followers.

Gandhi declined to outline the nature of the proposed movement, although I raised the question several times. It was evident he was troubled about the extent to which he would be supported by the important All-India Congress, which has been one of the principal aids in his long fight for India's independence.

Rejection Likely, He Agrees

But while he was both mysterious and mystical in discussing the new movement, Gandhi reiterated he was not waiting until the war ended, but wanted results now.

He said that if freedom for India were granted by the British, he would be willing to have British and American forces remain in India to fight the Japanese.

Asked what would be the next move in event that a freedom demand were rejected—something he agreed was by far the greatest likelihood—he replied:

"It will be a move which will be felt by the whole world.

"It may not interfere with the movement of British troops, but it is sure to engage British attention.

"India free and independent will play a prominent part in defending China. Today I do not think she is rendering an real help to China. We have followed a nonembarrassment policy so far. We will follow it even now, but we cannot allow the British government to exploit it."

Throughout the interview Gandhi toyed with a wet towel on his head. He wears it constantly to help keep cool. He wore little else, save a twist of white sheeting about the hips.

Referring to reports that the United States was pressing Britain to make drastic concessions to India to bring her wholeheartedly into the war, I asked if he expected any results from such action. He replied that he did not expect results—but held some hope.

India Could Do "Great Things"

"But British diplomacy is so clever," Gandhi said, "that America, even though it may not be committed (to Britain retaining control of India), in spite of the desire of President Roosevelt and the people to help India, may not succeed.

"British propaganda is so well organized in America against the Indian cause that the few friends India has there have no chance of being effectively heard. The political system is so rigid that public opinion does not affect the Administration."

Asked what India could do to aid in the war against Japan in event she were granted freedom, Gandhi said:

"Great things. I can say that at once although I may not be able to specify them today." He added:

"I want India to oppose Japan to a man. If India were free, she would do it. In 24 hours her mind would be changed."

No Territorial Aims, Axis Assures India

Berlin (from German broadcasts), June 15 (AP).—Diplomatic representatives of Germany, Italy and Japan told a meeting of Indian representatives at Bangkok today that the Axis was motivated by lofty purposes in wishing to see India attain independence and had no territorial interests there.

(The so-called Indian Independence Conference called by Japan at the Thai capital is being attended by Indian Nationalist elements for the most part excluded from India or rounded up from the Indian colonies in Japanese-conquered Burma, Thailand and Malaya.)

Dispatches from Bangkok reported Dr. Ernst Wendler, the German Ambassador, said that in contrast to the British and Americans, whom he asserted "invariably oppressed peoples in their sphere of power," the Axis was striving for a new order under which India could control her own destiny.

One dispatch said that at the meeting were representatives of an Indian national army being formed to cooperate with the Japanese.

National U. War Law Study Opens

Economy must be managed in order to defeat the totalitarian powers, Dr. James S. Thomas, War Production Board training specialist, declared last night at the opening session of the War Law Institute sponsored by National University's School of Law.

Dollars, he told the 125 members of the bar and Government executives who attended the institute, do not determine war strength, but materials plus man power which follows leadership.

James D. Hayes, assistant chief and legal consultant of the insurance claims council, Veterans' Administration, said the present National Service Life Insurance Act is not as liberal as that which finally evolved from the amendments of World War I days.

The next session of the institute will be held tomorrow evening from 6:30 to 8:30, with Dr. Milton I. Baldinger, the institute's director, as the speaker.

American Pilots in R.A.F. Fire German Minesweeper

London, June 15 (AP).—American pilots of the Second Eagle Squadron participated in a successful R. A. F. attack today on a German minesweeper which was left sinking off the Dutch coast.

The Air Ministry said Spitfires dipped so low the pilots could see the sweeper's guns fore and aft. They were silenced after the first attack.

German shore batteries tried to drive the planes away, but were unable to prevent a second sweep which caused a big explosion in the stern of the vessel.

Light enemy craft and barges off the French coast and in Belgium also were reported attacked.

Squadron Leader W. B. Cooper of Petersburg, Fla., an American volunteer with the R. A. F., was credited with sinking two German supply ships off the Dutch coast last night.

Bombers Elude Nazis

Cairo, June 15 (AP).—All the big four-motored United States Army Air Force planes which were reported to have bombed the Rumanian oil region last week were said reliably to have returned to their bases safely, except the four which were forced to land in Turkey.

Informed quarters said the planes eluded German fighters but ran into considerable antiaircraft fire.

(In Washington, Secretary Hull said no representation would be made to Turkey concerning the internment of 21 American fliers who were forced to land there.)

From Swing to Swine

Vichy, June 15 (AP).—It's back to the farm for young French disciples of swing. Paris police swept down on swank Champs Elysees Bars Saturday night in the first official move against the dance craze of the Parisian younger set since the armistice.

Those who could not prove they were working or studying were requisitioned for farm work.

Evader Sentenced

Boston, June 15 (AP).—Irving Kemler, 32-year-old shoe store owner, convicted of attempting bribery in an effort to have himself declared physically unfit for military service, was sentenced in Federal court today to serve two and one-half years in a penintentiary and pay a $1500 fine. Federal Judge Charles E. Wyzanski said:

"Your health has been sufficiently good for you to profit personally in a successful business in this country, you should have been proud to take your place in the ranks fighting a war in which not only the country but you, personally, have so much at stake."

Our Pilots Down Six Jap Bombers In Darwin Raid

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Tuesday), June 16 (AP).—Six Japanese bombers which attacked the northern Australian city of Darwin yesterday for the third time in three days were shot down by Allied fighters, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced today. Two of our fighters were lost.

Twenty-seven Japanese bombers participated in the attack on both residential areas and the Port of Darwin. They were escorted by 15 naval fighting planes, a communique said.

Material damage and casualties were slight, the communique said.

Life Is Hard, Goebbels Admits; 32 Die in Riot

By International News Service

London, June 15.—On the heels of reports of serious food rioting in Hamburg that cost at least 32 lives, Nazi Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels sadly admitted tonight that "life is hard" in Germany.

To help remedy the privations of the German people, Goebbels could prescribe nothing more tangible than "politeness." This appeared to be an indication that the Nazi leaders may have begun to acquire a feeling of despair in their attempts to meet increasing internal problems.

Goebbels' strange—and somewhat illuminating—utterance was made in a speech to a group of shop clerks and streetcar conductors in Berlin while distributing prizes to them for politeness. The propaganda chieftain's speech was broadcast by the Berlin radio. In it he acknowledged:

"Nobody can deny that the war has brought much worry to us. Hardly anybody has been spared. There are sorrows in everyday things as well as in the decisive problems of fate with which the whole German nation is faced today."

Admitting the existence of dissidents in Germany who do not accept the psychological prescriptions proffered by the Nazis, Goebbels complained:

"There are some people who do not understand that difficulties can be overcome by a united friendly attitude."

25 Executed in Hamburg

Stockholm dispatches, meanwhile, indicated that the people of Hamburg, at least, do not yet appreciate Goebbels' counsel of sugar-coating their sufferings with polite smiles.

In that city, which has long been Germany's traditional hotbed of revolution, hungry demonstrators—some armed with revolvers brought out of hiding—were said to have killed seven policemen in a street fight. Gestapo reinforcements were reported to have moved in, rounded up hundreds of persons and executed 25 alleged ringleaders.

All of the persons shot by Gestapo firing squads were described in a Stockholm dispatch as dockworkers in Germany's second city and chief seaport. Communist and other anti-Nazi groups have remained active in Hamburg in the underground opposition to the Hitler regime.

Hamburg, a metropolis of about 1,700,000 residents, was the scene of the 1918 mutiny by sailors of Kaiser Wilhelm's fleet that launched the downfall of the imperial German government and led to the armistice ending World War I.

Norwegian Battle Reported

London, June 15 (AP).—A Reuters dispatch from Stockholm reported today that many persons were wounded in Norway in a battle between followers of Vidkun Quisling, pro-Nazi premier, and other Norwegians in the towns of Rissa and Selbu, near Trondheim.

19 Bombs, 12 Torpedoes Destroyed Jap Carrier in Coral Sea inevitably built up among the carrier's crew when her planes were out on a fighting mission.

Carrier Refuels at Sea

Our task force had drawn away southward after the victory on May 4 at Tulagi Harbor in the Solomon Islands. Although we had not recognized it as such, total destruction of the occupation force, cruisers, destroyers and the all-important transports in Tulagi Harbor had been only the opening wedge of the desperate fight in which we now found ourselves.

On May 5 and 6 we had refueled at sea—never stopping our steaming but takin on fuel through hose lines that connected tankers with us. It was not essential for us to fuel, but Rear Admiral Fletcher, who was commanding the entire task force, and Rear Admiral Aubrey Fitch, commanding the Lexington group, believed that they should have their tanks as nearly full as possible at all times.

During the afternoon of May 6, our air scouts located the first of the Jap pincers fleet. It was 250 miles northeast of what then was our position and was described as two big carriers and four heavy cruisers and a dozen or more destroyers. This was the fleet sent to hold the Jomard Passage at the southeastern tip of New Guinea. Admiral Fletcher at once turned our force and steamed hard to be in position to hit the Japs the next day.

Off before dawn the morning of May 7, our scouts did not find the enemy for some hours. Shortly after 8 o'clock, however, they made contact. The Japs had split up during the night and our planes found only one carrier, three heavy cruisers and six destroyers. The other cruisers and carrier, plus six destroyers, had parted company with the main force and were not seen again on May 7.

Perfect Visibility

The American air fleet stalking the Japanese consisted of 24 torpedo planes, each with one heavy torpedo, 36 scouts and dive bombers, each with 1000-pound bomb or one 500-pound bomb and two 100-pound bombs, and 16 fighter planes to deal with Japanese defensive and scout plane patrols.

The route they followed was chosen to bring the airmen against the Japanese near the Island of Misima, the northernment island of the Louisaides Archipelago that is flung out off the eastern tip of New Guinea. Climbing through the clouds, they leveled off in clear air, then were able to see the ocean when the cloud layer ended.

Their course took them along the northern edge of the Island of Tagula, then north past the eastern tip of Misima. Lieutenant Commander Hamilton, leading the dive bambers, picked out the Japanese 50 miles away. Visibility was perfect, the sky cloudless, and the white wakes of the vessels showed as silver streaks on the emerald-blue sea.

"We came over at 12,000 feet," Lieut. Comdr. Bob Dixon explained later. Enemy fighter patrols were in the air, but they barely reached us as we eased off into our vertical dives. These fighters came right on down with us in a terrible free-for-all mixup, staying with us right to the water. Naturally we went for the carrier first.

Japs Caught by Surprise

"It was obvious we had caught them by surprise. They had a number of planes on deck, and one was coming up from the hangar deck in the elevator. I could see it all clearly as I kept my eye on them, sighting for the release point."

A dozen or more pilots told of that "fighting dive" the scouts had made. The enemy were in Zero (navy) fighters—best Jap combat ship—and they seemed to be confused by the refusal of the scout pilots to be distracted from their dives. While the pilots kept their eyes glued to their front dive sights, the rear gunners with their twin .30-caliber machine guns dealt with the Zeros.

Fighter pilots sitting up at 16,000 feet with the heavy dive bombers reported that Dixon's dive was perfectly made and his 500-pound bomb hit the Jap carrier deck amidships. Behind him Ensign P. F. Neely dropped his 500 pounder near the carrier's port side. The blast of Neely's bomb tossed two burning planes over the side.

Ensign Smith put his 500 pounder on the carrier's starboard antiaircraft battery. It silenced the guns and blew three more planes overboard.

Lieut. J. A. Leppler's scout bomber was attacked as the dive steepened to the vertical. His rear gunner, John Liska, shot down two Zeros that closed to point blank range, firing their cannon and .25 caliber machine guns as they came. Leppler saw a Zero on the tail of the scout ahead of him and veered in the dive enough to get it in the sights of his front guns. This Zero never came out of its dive and crashed into the sea. Leppler's 500-pound bomb missed the carrier, and he immediately zoomed away to make a second dive from 4000 feet on a Jap cruiser. One 100-pound bomb hit the cruiser's stern.

Ensign O. J. Schultz hit the carrier with his 500-pound bomb, but was attacked by four Zero fighters as he recovered. Schultz's rear gunner shot down one of these and the others banked away. Schultz brought his plane home although it was riddled with machine gun and cannon shot.

The scouts' dives had taken away the enemy fighter protection and the heavier dive bombers, toting their 1000 pounders, were unhindered in their attacks. The few seconds required for the first attack had given the accompanying Japanese vessels time to fan out, presumably to give the carrier maneuvering room. All the Japanese vessels put up a thick antiaircraft fire.

The heavy dive bomber and the torpedo plane assaults were coordinated and the Zeros which had followed the scout bombers swept off in an effort to turn aside Lieut. Comdr. Jimmy Brett's torpedo planes now closing in. Brett radioed for fighter assistance. Lieutenant Baker and his wingman, who had just shot down a Jap seaplane fighter, bored in. They dropped two Zeros and cleared off the rest.

"The next few minutes were beyond description," Lieut. Comdr. Jimmy Flatley told me. "The sight of those heavy dive bombers smashing that carrier was so awful I was physicaly ill. They followed each other at 3 to 4-second intervals and about every second bomb landed and exploded aboard the ship. Those powerful explosions were literally tearing the big ship apart. She burst into flames from bow to stern.

One Hit Sinks Cruiser

All this action was taking place within split seconds and actually happened in a shorter space of time than it now takes to detail it. Commander Brett, whose torpedo bombers were close to the water, took advantage of smoke and flame clouds already pouring out of the carrier as they approached. They swung in at an angle so the smoke screened them from most of the cruiser and destroyer antiaircraft fire.

This enabled the T. B. D.'s (torpedo bomber Douglas) planes in his squadron to score hits with 12 of their "tin fish." They blasted the carrier to bits and she sank in a cloud of steam and smoke three minutes later. In all, 16 of the 1000-pound bombs, three 500 pounders, and the 12 torpedoes hit the ship.

"It all happened so fast and the results were so final," one Navy dive bomber pilot reported later, "that when it came my turn to dive I saved my bomb. It wasn't needed. I picked out one of the cruisers instead."

Several of his comrades said they saw his bomb hit flush on the cruiser's deck. There was a blinding flash and when the smoke cleared the cruiser had stopped. In a few minutes, they said, it slid under the waves, sunk by this one hit.

Back on the Lexington, of course, we knew nothing about this magnificent action. The crew remained at battle stations and the ship's loudspeakers were connected with the airplane intercommunication radio circuits. We could hear a confusion of commands and conversation, but all this was dimmed by distance—they were over 165 miles away from us as we steamed on toward them—and by static.

Then came a strong clear call to the carrier from Lieut. Comdr. Dixon. His message reechoed over the entire boat:

"Scratch one flat-top."

This was Navy parlance for the sinking of a carrier—a crisp expression of victory. Cheers rang all over the vessel. Men pounded each other on the back in exuberant expressions of joy.

Three planes failed to return from the flight—all scout bombers. Two were believed destroyed by antiaircraft fire. The third, flown by Lieut. Quigley, was landed on Rossel, easternmost island of the Louisiades. Quigley and his rear gunner were rescued several days later.

One of the missing ships was piloted by Lieut. Edward Allen, one of the first pilots I met on coming aboard the Lexington. As I write I have been informed he was awarded the Navy Cross on June 5 for his determination and courage in action on February 20 when his ship was attacked by 18 Jap bombers (the same action in which Lieut. O'Hare shot down five and damaged a sixth).

Almost all of our returning planes bore bullet holes and one rear gunner was wounded. The day's fighting was not over, however. The afternoon weather was bad, with rain squalls and low clouds, but our fighter squadrons went out. Just at dusk, with a mist beginning to obscure the ocean, they ran into a Japanese Zero squadron of nine. There were four of our ships, led by Lieut. Paul Ramsey.

"Nine Zeros. Tally-ho"

In the ensuing melee, with the little Wasp's planes diving and circling, we heard the following radio dialog:

"Mable to Agnes. Japs. Nine Zeros. Tally-ho. You take the center pair and I'll take the last pair, Chum," came Ramsey's voice.

"Here we go, see you later," came the voice of "Agnes." There was the usual jumble of static and minutes passed. Then Ramsey's voice again. He was speaking to Lieutenant Commander Flatley, who had come into the scrap and attacked the leading five Zeros.

"Paul to Flatley. How many did you get, Jimmy?"

"Three for sure. How many did you get?"

"Only two, darn it," was the reply dripping with disappointment.

Back on board the Lexington we learned that Lieutenant Baker had collided with a Jap fighter in the second scrap and both crashed at sea. Baker was the only casualty, but one other American pilot was unable to return to the carrier in the poor visibility and after an hour and a half of milling in the darkness he alighted on an island.

A group of us were standing on the Lexington's flight deck talking over the day when the final thrill came. Nosing out of the murk were nine planes, planes we neither knew nor recognized. They dipped directly over us, peeled off into the single file landing circle, and flashed on their lights. The leader began a regular flashing of code signal.

It happened that our own landing code signal that day started in the same manner so that all of us stood stunned with surprise for a moment. Then a gunner on one of our protecting cruisers recognized the planes as Japanese. He opened fire and was followed by every gun on the other flotilla members. I often wondered what would have happened if we had allowed the Japs to make a landing.

But this was not to be. They snapped off their navigation and landing lights with the first shot and almost immediately disappeared. Following them, a lone scout plane reported that they were seen alighting on a carrier only 30 miles away. This scout, directed home by radio from the Lexington, said that he counted a huge Japanese force accompanying the carrier.

All this meant peril for our flotilla. The Japanese unquestionably were warned and perhaps hunting us through the darkness. In spite of the weather a night action impended and ship's company remained at action stations.

In a lull I counted up the day's results. We had sunk a large Japanese carrier and a cruiser and had knocked 23 planes out of the air. Besides this number there were also the Jap planes that went down aboard their carrier.

In our enemy we recognized a tough, fanatical foe whose courage and cunning could not be discounted. Our forces appeared about equal. It was a question of who could get the first blow home. We had seen what planes could do to a carrier in the day's action. Tomorrow would come the world's first battle between two strong carrier forces, each knowing of the other's presence. History was in the making as we groped through the pitch black night.

My next story will tell of the Lexington's last battle.

Bombardier Hero Of Midway Battle

LIEUT. HARRY H. FITTS, 25, of Macon, N. C., is the first publicly acclaimed hero of the battle between American air arms and a Japanese invasion flotilla off Midway Island in the Pacific. Lieut. Pilot of the B-17 which carried Lieut. Fitts successfully over his target was Capt. Charles E. Gregory of Houston

Treasury Proposes To Create Ceiling With 100% Levy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A tax of 100 per cent yesterday was recommended by the Treasury to level high-bracket incomes under a $25,000 war ceiling.

Backing up the President's proposals for a net limit on individual income during wartime, the Treasury presented its super-tax plan to a noncommittal House Wary and Means Committee.

The 100 per cent tax would apply on individual income in excess of $25,000 after payment of other Federal taxes. Married couples would be permitted $25,000 apiece, or a application of the tax.
joint income of $50,000 clear before

Randolph E. Paul, tax advisor of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, estimated the special over-all tax would reach about 11,000 persons and yield the Treasury about 184 million dollars in additional revenue.

Only single persons whose incomes before taxes exceeded $50,000 or married couples with combined incomes above $185,000 would be affected.

Recalling President Roosevelt's call for "equality of privilege," Paul told the committee that "the great masses of our people will more cheerfully bear : substantial reduction in standard of living if they know that no group is being favored; that rich and poor alike are giving up the comforts of peacetime in order that we may more effectively prosecute the war."

Original Proposal Modified

The House Ways and Means Committee took no immediate action on the plan, in which congressional joint committee tax experts had failed to concur. There was substantial committee opposition when the President originally proposed the limit, but the Treasury plan included a number of modifications, including some allowance for debt and charit- contributions.

The Treasury meanwhile laid before the committee "without recommendation" a list of about a dozen articles and services in general daily use on which it said excises might be levied for more than 200 million dollars additional revenue.

The committee had fallen far short of the Treasury request for $1,344,900,00 in new excise revenue.

The Treasury list, on which it carefully withheld judgment, included taxes on such daily food items as sugar, salt, coffee, tea and cocoa, as well as levies on electric power, fuel gas, barber and beauty shop services and freight and express transportation.

One Cent on Coffee

These items would be covered in most plans for a general sales tax, to which the Treasury is vigorously opposed. Although details of the new schedule were not made public, it was said that the sugar excise, for example, would be one-half cent a pound, and raise about $50,000,000, and the coffee rate, a cent a pound. The committee discussed the schedule for a full morning session, but took no action.

Committee staff experts submitted another suggested list of excises, including a proposal to remove existing second-class mailing privileges of newspapers, magazines and periodicals. The committee was told $78,000,000 could be raised by raising the mail rates on publications.

The Treasury joined with staff experts in recommending revised tax treatment of inventories during the war period of fluctuating prices. Paul proposed that taxpayers be authorized to set up temporary reserves for possible future inventory losses. The reserves would be deductible in computing taxable income. If price inflation increased the value of basic inventory, reserves could be increased by that amount. In a year of declining prices, he would be required to subtract from his reserve.

Hardships because of debt commitments, one of the initial objections to the 100 per cent tax, would be met under the new proposal by allowing a deduction for debt up to 15 per cent of income after present income taxes. This would also be extended to people who had no debt commitments, provided it was spent on other financial commitments, such as insurance premiums on old policies, or was invested in Federal securities.

Where the tax found a taxpayer without cash sufficient to meet it, it was suggested that "for the first year only" the tax liability on the income of the previous year be allowed as a deduction.

Present law provision for deduction of charitable contributions up to 15 per cent of net income would be continued. Paul noted that the tax would serve to increase such contributions, but said the effect would not necessarily be undesirable."

Senate Passes Bill to Draft Family Men

By the Associated Press

The Senate speedily approved yesterday legislation to aid the families of service men through a system of pay allotments and Government grants.

The measure, which now goes to the House, clears the way for the drafting of husbands and fathers who are family breadwinners if Army and Navy needs should require it. One of its provisions, however, authorizes the President to direct draft boards to take into consideration a man's family relationship when the question of induction arises.

Families Intact Is Hope

That provision amends the Selective Service Act. As the act now stands, a man's wife and children are not reasons for his deferment unless they are actually dependent on his earnings for their livelihood. A working wife, who earns her own living, it not, for instance, presently a cause for deferment, but under the pending meaure a draft board could take into consideration the undesirability of breaking up a home.

Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado, author of the measure, said he had been assured by Selective Service headquarters that the machinery would be set up in the local boards to see to it that men with wives and children would not be called into the service while single men were available.

The allotment section of the legislation applies to dependents of privates, first-class privates, corporals and line sergeants, in the Army, and the corresponding grades in the other service groups.

To Get Allowances

Under the plan, "Class A" dependents, wives and children, would be paid the allowances and allotments upon application of the husband in uniform, upon their own request, or that of other interested persons. Allowances would be paid to "Class B" dependents—parents, brothers, sisters, grandparents or grandchildren—only on application of the man in uniform.

A wife with no children would receive $50 monthly—$22 from the husband and $28 from the Government. With one child she would get an additional $12 from the Government and $10 for each additional child. For one child, but no wife, the service man would give $22 and the Government $20, with additional Federal payments of $10 for each additional child.

Goebbels Prints Bogus Anti-Nazi Papers

London, June 15.—Angered by the ever-growing success of the anti-Nazi newspapers secretly printed and distributed in occupied France by supporters of the Allies, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels' propaganda experts have begun the production of bogus clandestine newspapers and pamphlets designed to fool the French workers, it was learned today.

These bogus papers look at first sight like the "genuine" papers, bearing the words "read and pass around. Thank you"—as do the others. They are filled with the rudest of Nazi propaganda, but do not fool the French workers, who pass them on to friends—simply as a cover for genuine anti-Nazi newspapers.

Congress Applauds as King Reviews Greek War Effort

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

King George of Greece, a monarch whose experiences are recorded in his careworn expression, told applauding members of Congress yesterday that Greek resistance to the Axis powers had gained "seven precious months" at a most crucial stage of the war.

Speaking first in the Senate, where he was greeted by Vice President Wallace, the King next visited the House. He delivered the same brief speech before both bodies.

"For centuries Greece has held aloft the torch of freedom, and never more than now," said Wallace in introducing the King.

The visitor was warmly greeted in both houses as he spoke feelingly of "fighting Greece, now disposed less than ever to surrender its great heritage of civilization and languish a prisoner to the powers of darkness and evil."

Italy's Prestige Shattered

"At one of the most critical crossroads of human history, when the fate of civilization hung in the balance, Greece proved by its stand that no price was too high to pay for human freedom and international decency," he said.

"Fortunately the sacrifices of my country were not in vain. Due to the resistance of the Greek people in continental Greece and in Crete, seven precious months were gained at a most crucial stage of the war, and the plans of the invader went awry."

"The Greek victories in Albania shattered irretrievably Italy's prestige and our resistance to Germany saved precious time for other fronts."

The intrepid ruler who left his country only when Axis troops were approaching Athens, received his greatest burst of applause in the House when he said:

"However small our contribution may appear to be in contrast with what you are doing, it is everything we have."

The example of the United States in imposing justice upon itself, under its democratic system, so that it may exact it from others, and its refusal to attack weaker nations, have inspired the people of the world and will provide "the foundations of the happier and more harmonious life after the war, which humanity expects," the King told the legislators.

Introduced in the House by Speaker Sam Rayburn, King George remained to shake hands with the members, to whom he was introduced by Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee.

Before leaving for the Capitol King George held a reception at the Blair House for members of the Overseas Writers, an organization of Washington correspondents who have had newspaper service abroad. The members were introduced to the monarch by the club's president, Barnet Nover, of The Washington Post.

Windsor Silent After 3-Hour Talk With Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

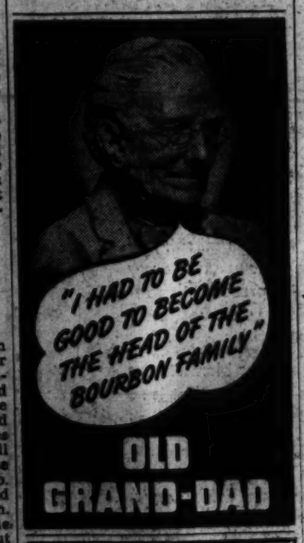

The Duke of Windsor, Britain's former King, conferred with President Roosevelt for three hours yesterday and said they had talked about "the world in general" but had made no decision on anything.

Windsor, now governor of the Bahamas, reached Washington earlier in the day after cutting short a visit here a fortnight ago to fly back to the Bahamas when labor troubles and rioting broke out there.

The Bahaman governor said he had enjoyed his talk with Mr. Roosevelt, that it was "very interesting" but he could not go into details. He laughed when reporters pressed him on the reason for such a lengthy conference.

"Intrigued, are you?" he remarked.

The Duke, looking fit after a busy fortnight on the islands, was met at his train this morning by Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador. British officials said the Duke would remain here until tonight, when he would rejoin the Duchess either in New York, where she now is, or in Baltimore.

Army Plane Hits Hangar; 2 Killed

San Francisco, June 15 (AP).—An Army plane crashed into a hangar at Mills Field, south of San Francisco, today, killing the pilot and an enlisted man who was in the hangar. Army officials identified the dead as Second Lieut. James Mitchell, son of Mrs. T. W. Mitchell of Cleveland, the pilot, and Private Leverett B. Thomas, Burley, Idaho.

The hangar was badly damaged by fire which followed the crash. Four planes standing beside the building also were damaged, but officials said they probably could be repaired.

X-Ray Editor Summoned by Axis Probers

Court Asher, the Muncie, Ind., editor whose weekly paper, The X-ray, was barred from the mails for sedition, has been ordered to appear Thursday before the special grand jury on Axis agents.

Asher was ordered by a District Court summons to produce all the files of his business and copies of his paper for the last 2 years.

The grand jury reached even farther back, in their quest for information about Gerald B. Winrod, a Hitler admirer who issues The Defender magazine every month in Wichita, Kans. Sent to the Federal Marshal at Topeka, Kans., for service was a summons commanding Winrod's printers to produce his files and copies of his magazine for 3 years.

Questioned Several Weeks Ago

The Winrod summons was directed to the Herald Publishing Co. in Newton, Kans. Winrod recently began moving his enterprises to Newton, where, he is reported to have gathered a number of sympathizers.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney, Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, jr., U.S.N., and John T. M. Reddan questioned Winrod at length before the special grand jury several weeks ago. This was at the start of the current investigation of publications and groups suspected of Nazi inspiration or control. It was understood at the time that Winrod was to be asked about his distribution of hundreds of copies of Representative Clare E. Hoffman's "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech.

Others Ordered to Appear

Others ordered to appear Thursday include:

Charles B. Hudson, Omaha, Nebr., editor of an anti-British bulletin called America in Danger, Hudson is alleged to have distributed copies of Hoffman's speech and a subversive postcard in the same envelopes.

William Griffin, editor of the New York Enquirer, collaborator of the jailed German agent, George Sylvester Viereck. Griffin printed the seditious card used by Hudson in the Enquirer and was cited for contempt of court last week when he claimed he could not remember whether Viereck paid him to do so.

President Asks $100,000,000 'Blank Check'

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress for another 100-million-dollar presidential emergency fund appropriation, with 25 million dollars earmarked "for objects of a confidential nature."

The estimates would bring to nearly half a billion dollars total appropriations and contract authorizations since 1940 for the President's special war contingent fund.

Wayne Coy, acting budget director, wrote Congress that the added 100 million dollars outlay "is deemed highly necessary at this time to provide for unforseen contingencies, requiring the immediate allocation of funds in connection with the war."

As with former emergency fund appropriations, the new sum would not be subject to other provisions of law regulating expenditures or employment of Government personnel. The 25-million-dollar earmarking, when spent, would not be subject to public voucher declarations concerning its confidential purposes.

8 Jap Warships Reported Hit In Aleutians

and our attacks are continuing, this announcement said.

Then, late yesterday, came the following report, in communique No. 9:

"North Pacific Area—The Army and Navy are continuing air attacks against the Japanese forces which recently were reported to have landed on western islands of the Aleutian group.

"Foul weather and fog, characteristic of this locality at all seasons, are hampering our reconnaissance and attack operations, but reports to date indicate that at least three cruisers, one destroyer, one gunboat and one transport have been damaged, some of them severely.

"Except for these continuing air attacks upon the enemy landing parties and their supporting naval contingents, the general situation in the Aleutian Islands appears unchanged."

The first attack on the Aleutians came June 3, when a small force of Jap carrier planes bombed Dutch Harbor, America's westernmost Alaskan base, situated on Unalaska Island, about half way between the mainland and Attu.

Thereafter but little word came from the fog-bound region, although it was said that American forces were searching for the Japanese fleet. It was reported that our planes had found and bombed the latter with undetermined results, although this was never officially announced.

Officials Show Little Concern

Then came the announcement of the landing in Attu and continuing operations in that remote area—more than 750 nautical miles west of Dutch Harbor. Officials, apparently not much concerned about the landing, saw three possible motives in the attack:

An attempt to regain "face" at home, by making an "invasion of North America" at a probable cheap cost.

Seizure of Attu and Kiska to prevent our using them as stepping stones for attacks on Japan and for possible limited use on their part as a base for attack on Dutch Harbor. The Japs, however, would have great difficulty in installing base facilities in this isolated area, officials feel.

Preliminary to wagilg war against Russia, Japan might try to cut the most direct aerial supply route between America and the Soviet Union. Their objective here would be both an attempt to curb supplies going to Siberia from United States arsenals, and to prevent American bombers from hitting Japan via Vladivostok.

Foe Is Paying Heavily

Whatever motive or combination of motives the Japns have in mind, yesterday's reports make it plain that they are paying heavily for whatever they hope to gain, probably far more than it will be worth to them.

For, although it is still too early to make definite claims of a decisive American victory in the Battle of the Aleutians, it appeared last night that such may be developing. Following close the smashing defeats given the Japs in the Coral Sea and at Midway, the series of naval and air battles may prove all important in the future of the Pacific war.

Score Brought Up to Date

Counting the results reported yesterday by the Navy and General Arnold, the Japs have suffered the following losses in the three battles:

Nineteen ships sunk, including five cruisers and five aircraft carriers.

Thirty-four damaged, including three battleships, six cruisers and four carriers.

Three probably sunk, including one cruiser and one carrier.

Three probably damaged, including two cruisers and a carrier. A total of 59 ships, mostly major war vessels.

Against this imposing enemy toll, American losses have been one aircraft carrier, two destroyers and a tanker sunk, and a carrier damaged.

Possibility of Duplications

The above tabulation of Japanese losses is based on the assumption that the cruiser reported sunk by General Arnold was not one of those listed as damaged by the Navy. Officials had no information last night as to whether there was a duplication here possibly resulting from difficulty in observing damage done by bombers, especially in bad weather.

Nor was there any official explanation of how such an important battle action came to be reported in a congratulatory message to an aircraft manufacturer. The telegram was released by the Martin Co. and approved for publication either by the War Department or local Army officials in Baltimore.

Army Air Force press officers knew nothing of the announcement until after it was published in Baltimore newspapers. The story and the extraordinary method of its release raised something of a storm throughout Air Force headquarters and the rest of the War Department.

General Arnold's Message

The text of the message follows:

"High praise for the B-26s the men and women in your employ have sent to Army Air Forces has come coincidentally from two far-flung battlefronts at Gen. (Delos C.) Emmons in Hawaii and Gen. (S. B.) Buckner in Alaska report the magnificent part your bombers played in the recent successes off Midway and the Aleutian Islands.

"A flight of four of your airplanes attacked a cruiser or battleship in the former engagement and scored one positive hit, with another probable.

"In the Aleutian Islands, a group of B-26s made three attacks on the main Japanese task force, sinking a cruiser and scoring two hits with torpedoes besides dropping a torpedo on the deck of a carrier.

"May I extend my gratitude to you and your company for the extremely important part you have played and are playing and I am sure will continue to play in the success of the Army Air Forces both at home and abroad."

Guns of Black Sea Fleet Blunt Drive on Sevastopol

ous sectors on Sunday, along with destruction of 220 truck loads of Nazi troops and supplies and an enemy transport and a number of motorboats, presumably around Sevastopol.

The Black Sea fleet, normally based on Sevastopol but now probably driven from that strongest of Crimean fortresses by the intensity of German bombers and artillery, was reported to have blasted great gaps in the massed ranks of attacking Axis troops in a barrage laid down on the siege lines.

(The Berlin radio said the Soviet fleet attempted to approach the western Crimean coast near Yevpatoriya in an attack "obviously intended to divert attention from Sevastopol." German coastal artillery was said to have hit several warships, forcing the naval force to withdraw.)

Latest unofficial reports placed the fleet's strength at one old battleship, the lone Russian aircraft carrier, and unspecified numbers of cruisers, destroyers, submarines and small craft.

The carnage around Kharkov was totaled in an earlier communique as "2850 men and much material" in two days.

(The Germans said through "military quarters" in Berlin that the Kharkov battle had ended. The high command claimed 25,000 prisoners and the destruction of "remnants of the beaten enemy." Around Sevastopol, the Nazis claimed officially to have seized several positions.)

About Leningrad, 1355 Nazis were reported slaughtered by guerillas in a five-day struggle.

(The British radio declared that information from enemy sources said German and Italian troops had launched a new offensive by land and sea on long-besieged Leningrad.

("The enemy even claims to have succeeded in landing some troops behind the Soviet lines in barges," the B. B. C. said. The attack was said to be supported by artillery and bombers.)

Murmansk, the Arctic supply port through which United States and British tanks, planes and other material are siphoned to the front, was attacked five times by German planes Sunday, but the Russians said there was no military damage.

(The German communique claimed successes in local attacks on the northern and central fronts and the repulse of Red attacks near Volkhov. A Soviet force was said to have been encircled and annihilated in Lapland.)

A battalion of German Storm Troops attempted to attack the Russians on the northwest front, the Soviet communique said.

"By a strong counterblow our men threw the enemy back," it added. Many Germans were killed."

Donets Crossed, Germans Claim

Berlin (From German Broadcasts), June 15 (AP).—The Transocean news agency reported tonight that German forces advancing east of Kharkov "have crossed the Donets River at all important points."

This report, broadcast by the Berlin radio, was attributed to "competent Berlin military quarters."

Foe Driving Hard In Libya Battle

Striving to Cut Off Tobruk

Everywhere in this overflowing cauldron of desert battle the British forces were counterattacking in an attempt to smash the Axis spearheads which, it was acknowledged, were endeavoring to cut off Tobruk, stanch bastion which is the key to defense of the Egyptian border, from forces to the west.

Ain El Gazala, where both South African and British forces are in the most immediate danger, is 40 miles west of Tobruk; Acroma, where the fighting has ben heaviest, is 10 miles west of Tobruk.

Today's British communique, reflecting a situation capable of hourly change, said the Eighth Army was "in the process of adjusting its dispositions to meet developments."

These developments, naturally, were the threat of envelopment of the forces in the Ain El Gazala salient and the developing menace to Tobruk itself from the coastal territory just to the west.

South of Tobruk, the British mobile columns were reported officially to have cleared out the roaming Axis forces east of El Adem, thus forestalling for the time being any Axis maneuver designed to encircle Tobruk. El Adem is 15 miles below Tobruk.

When the battle was resumed yesterday after a sandstorm had forced a brief halt, R. A. F. fighters and bombers launched a widespread assault in both forward and rearward Axis-held areas. The British planes pounded Italian and German tanks and trucks near Acroma and conducted the second of two heavy raids on the main Axis airdrome at Derna, on the Cirenaican coastal hump, setting bright fires amid dispersed enemy aircraft.

Presumably it is from Derna that the heavily reinforced Axis air forces are ranging deep into Egypt and far out to sea.

Convoy Blasted, Italians Claim

transports—was believed bound for Alexandria or Malta.

The biggest part already had been forced to turn back from the attempt to pass through the 100-mile wide passage between Sardinia and Sicily on one side and Tunisia on the other, Il Giornale D'Italia declared.

Italian official quarters said nothing concerning the second convoy, but informed sources said they believed it was westbound from Suez or Alexandria.

From dawn to dusk yesterday, said a special communique, Italian torpedo planes, dive bombers, fighters and bombers swarmed in five different attacks upon the eastbound convoy.

Twenty Italian planes were lost and 15 planes which rose from the two defending carriers were shot down, the Italians said.

The high command summed up the convoy's losses as follows:

Sunk:
Two cruisers.
A destroyer.
Four other ships.
Badly damaged:
A battleship.
An aircraft carrier.
Two cruisers.
A destroyer.
Four more ships.

At sunup Sunday, according to Il Giornale D'Italia, the first blow was delivered by torpedo planes, dive bombers, and bombers accompanied by fighters as the convoy drew opposite Sardina and near Cape Teulada, midway between Philippeville and Cape Bon on the Tunisian coast.

Two more assaults were delivered, the paper related, and then the convoy came within range of Sicily, whence two more attacks were made.

In the course of these attacks, said the newspaper, the convoy suffered great damage and became confused and dispersed. The greater part turned back, and only a few transports accompanied by a few light warships continued on the way.

It was this section, said the paper, upon which the Italians renewed their assaults this morning. Up to 4 p. m. the attack was said to be continuing.

All-Night Blackout Test Tomorrow

lights will go off at 10 and not on again until Thursday night. Civilian defense officials suggest that house lights be operated on same schedule.

Cars may proceed with dimmed lights at 15 miles an hour all night except during the half-hour alarm period, when none but official emergency cars may travel. The alarm period will probably occur between 10 and midnight, so persons with engagements or trains to meet are warned to allow a half-hour leeway in their timing.

Pointing out that Washington now has one of the best records in the country for traffic safety during blackout periods, Director of Traffic William A. Van Duzer, administrator of defense transportation for the District, appealed to motorists to keep the record intact during the all-night test tomorrow night.

Beginning at 10 p. m., traffic lights at about 300 intersections will be dimmed from 110 to 27 volts. Other traffic signals will remain on full until the alert signal is sounded sometime before midnight. Then they will be extinguished for the duration of the alarm period.

Half-Hour Alarm Period

After the "all clear," traffic lights not equipped with dimmer devices will be turned on full again and will operate until midnight.

Except for the half-hour alarm, motorists who must be on the streets will be permitted to drive with full headlights using city-driving beams. At the sound of the alert, however, all traffic except authorized emergency vehicles must stop with lights out, and occupants must seek shelter leaving their keys in their cars.

Washington has had two practice blackouts without a serious traffic mishap, and there has been only one accident fatality in the entire metropolitan area during blackout periods. None has occurred in the city limits.

Seven Safety Points

The seven points for safety listed by Van Duzer are:

Don't drive your car during the blackout unless absolutely necessary.

Don't walk around the streets. Stay indoors unless it is imperative you go out.

If it is necessary to drive your car, remember the maximum speed limit during blackouts is 15 miles an hour.

If you must be on the streets afoot, exercise every care. Remember, it will be difficult for drivers to see you. Wear something white if possible or carry something white.

Be careful approaching intersections where traffic lights have been dimmed and keep a sharp lookout for changing signals.

Use special caution in alighting from streetcars and buses and in reaching the sidewalk from loading or safety zones.

Yield the right of way to all emergency vehicles identified by red inside dome lights or special illuminated windshield signs.

Allies Will Share War Cost According to Each Nation's Ability to Pay

ter transmitting the report follows:

"To the Congress of the United States of America:

"This is the fifth 90-day report to the Congress on operations under the Lend-Lease Act.

"For the three months ending May 31, 1942, lend-lease aid amounted to more than $1,900,000,000. For the 15-month period from March, 1941, through May, 1942, aid totaled $4,497,000,000 in goods and services. We are now making aid available at a monthly rate equivalent to eight billion dollars per year.

Beneficiaries New Reciprocate

"Dollars figures do not portray all that is happening. The Congress has wisely set few limits to the types of aid which may be and are being provided. Food—over five billion pounds—and medicine have helped to sustain the British and Russian and Chinese peoples in their gallant will to fight. Metals, machine tools and other essentials have aided them to maintain and step up their production of munitions. The bombardment planes and the tanks which were ordered for them last spring and summer are now putting their mark on the enemy. The British pilots trained in this country have begun their work at Cologne and Essen.

"And lend-lease is no longer one way. Those who have been receiving lend-lease aid in their hour of greatest need have taken the initiative in reciprocating. To the full extent of their ability, they are supplying us, on the same lend-lease basis, with many things we need now. American troops on Australian and British soils are being fed and housed and equipped in part out of Australian and British supplies and weapons. Our Allies have sent us special machine tools and equipment for our munitions factories. British antiaircraft guns help us to defend our vital bases, and British-developed detection devices assist us to spot enemy aircraft. We are sharing the blueprints and battle experience of the United Nations.

"These things, invaluable as they have proven, are not the major benefit we will receive for our lend-lease aid. That benefit will be the defeat of the Axis. But the assistance we have been given by our partners in the common struggle is heartening evidence of the way in which the other United Nations are pooling their resources with our own. Each United Nation is contributing to the ultimate victory not merely in dollars, pounds or rubles, but the full measure of its men, its weapons, and its productive capacity.

"Our reservoir of resources is now approaching flood stage. The next step is for our military, industrial, and shipping experts to direct its full force against the centers of enemy power. Great Britain and the United States have together set up expert combined bodies to do the job, in close cooperation with Russia, China and the other United Nations. They are equipping the United Nations to fight this world-wide war on a world-wide basis. They are taking combined action to carry our men and weapons—on anything that will float or fly—to the places from which we can launch our offensives.

"By combined action now, we can preserve freedom and restore peace to our peoples. By combined action later, we can fulfill the victory we have joined to attain. The concepts of the United Nations will not perish on the battlefields of this terrible war. It will live to lay the basis of the enduring world understanding on which mankind depends to preserve its peace and its freedom.

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.
"The White House, June 15, 1942."

Hungary's Premier Warns Rumania

Bern, Switzerland, June 15 (AP).—The old enmity between Hungary and Rumania flared again today when the Hungarian Premier, Nicholas Kallay, replied to new anti-Hungarian measures in Rumania with a warning Hungary would defend her present frontiers "to the death."

Kallay spoke near the Rumanian frontier in Hungarian Transylvania at the same time the Hungarian press published reports the Rumanians were forcing the Hungarian minority to leave the Rumanian Transylvania by confiscating their foodstuffs and refusing to give them ration cards.

These reports said Rumanian soldiers, descending in force, broke into homes and took even the current day's food supply from the Hungarians, who were given exit visas to cross to their homeland on foot. This was the first use of force reported in the dispute between the two Axis satellites over the question of Transylvania and Vienna award, which gave the northern part of this territory to Hungary in 1940.

Our Protective Cleaning for Your Precious Blankets Is Now More Important than Ever

Recognize the patriotic importance of making your blankets last . . . wool is "in the service" now . . . but you may still enjoy, next fall, the luxury of nestling under fluffy, blissfully warm blankets. Learn, to your delight, what re-vitalizing wonders Woodward & Lothrop's protective blanket cleaning performs. Here is the kindly treatment we give your blankets to increase their life span and renew their warmth:

We wash your blankets in a neutral suds that gently removes all soil and dust with a minimum of mechanical action. Rinsing follows until every trace of suds is removed. Then, natural-air drying—to preserve this regained softness. Finally, blankets are carded with just such machinery as better blanket manufacturers use.

To you, this careful process means that your now-so-precious blankets are returned with their pile soft and deep again, with the buoyancy that is so important to warmth—blankets with every bit of deteriorating soil eliminated—blankets that will give you longer service.

If you wish, we store them for you safely until fall, in our modern storage vaults, where they are protected from moths, from fire, from theft, dampness and dust.

For Washing		For Storing
Single blanket	75c	Single blanket	35c
Double blanket	$1.25	Double blanket or comfort	50c
Crib blanket	50c	Comforts	50c

Comforts dry cleaned—$1.50 up

Because bindings often wear out sooner than blankets themselves, we suggest re-binding worthy of the blankets' regained beauty. Prices are moderate—for example: A deep four-inch silk-and-rayon satin binding at both ends of an 81 to 90 inch blanket, $2.50.

2-Flag Patriot, 13, Is in Army, Parents Learn

There are undoubtedly thousands of American 13-year-olds who dream of running off to join the armed forces "to get revenge on Pearl Harbor," but it takes a large-for-his-age lad like Nick Chantiles to follow through with such an audacious notion.

NICK

Perhaps it was Nick's Greek ancestry that helped him convince Army recruiting officers he was 18. In a letter his father, Philip Chantiles, 1473 Eighteenth Street Northwest, received from him yesterday, the Army's youngest soldier said he had "two flags to uphold—the American flag and the Greek flag."

The letter, incidentally, was the first word Nick's parents had had of him since he left home on the night of May 7, ostensibly to take in a street carnival then in Washington. The boy has been on the Public Relations Squad list of missing persons since his disappearance was reported to them on the day following.

Nick, who weighs 170 pounds and is on the chunky side, apparently had no trouble at all in getting into the Army. After induction he was sent to Camp Lee, and then to Camp Claiborne, La., from whence he wrote the letter.

It also appears that he doesn't regret his action, for he described the Army as "the best outfit in the world."

The only hitch is that unless the War Department sets a precedent in Nick's case, he will in all likelihood soon be back in Washington—and in mufti. Official action probably will be taken at once to return the youngster to Washington for a little more seasoning at Powell Junior High School, where he was in Grade 7-B until he joined the colors.

Brief News Flashes Off The Wires

The telegraph news wires carried these briefs yesterday:

Three-year-old John Meyer, jr. of Cincinnati is minus his tonsils—thanks to a lollipop. An "all-day sucker" in his mouth, the boy fell from a swing. The candy jabbed his throat, severing one tonsil. The surgeon took the other.

After the showing of what must have been a side-splitting movie in a Gladewater, Tex., cinema, a theater employe found a set of false teeth in the aisle.

Las Vegas (N. Mex.) Boy Scouts labored diligently for months to collect 5 tons of waste paper. Yesterday the warehouse where the paper was stored was swept by fire and all of the boys' efforts went up in smoke.

Ten years from now, Mr. and Mrs. Bob McCord of Atlanta won't have to argue about what music was played at their wedding or whether he stammered over the vows. They had a sound recording made of the entire church ceremony—right from the organ prelude to the rice barrage.

Sailors Russell Emery and Benjamin Yzik, who came through the bombing and torpedoing of the aircraft carrier Lexington without a scratch, were injured in a San Diego traffic accident.

A drunken driver fleeing two Dallas policemen jumped out of his car and ran into an apartment house. The police pursued. A sign on the apartment warned them, but—All three were taken to a hospital. The apartment was being fumigated with cyanide gas.

Ewing Witness Sued for Divorce

Mrs. Emma K. Hager, of 212 Seventh Street Southeast, filed a petition in District Court yesterday for a limited divorce from Raymond Hager, who was sentenced June 2 to a year and a day for perjury during a hearing on a motion for a new trial for Orman W. Ewing, former politician convicted of raping a young Government worker.

Claiming in the petition that her husband had threatened her with physical violence, Mrs. Hager asked for custody of the two children.

Draft Cripples Radio, Says Fly

Chairman James L. Fly said yesterday that the Federal Communications Commission was considering asking Selective Service officials to adopt a policy of deferment of radio station technicians.

He told a press conference that the radio industry had been hard hit by loss of technical men to the armed services and war industry, particularly the smaller broadcasting stations.

Medical Units Lose Antitrust Appeal exclude co-op doctors and legal proceedings.

Upon the complaint of G. H. A., the Department of Justice launched an extensive investigation, which led to a special grand jury inquiry four years ago. This culminated in the indictment of A. M. A., the District society and of other organizations and individuals, on charges of violating the antitrust law. The District Court dismissed the indictment, but the Court of Appeals revived it and A. M. A. and the society were convicted last year.

The retired chief justice, George E. Martin, heard the appeal with Justice Wiley Rutledge and Justin Miller.

Justice Miller handed down the opinion.

Face "Profound Changes"

"Professions exist," said Justice Miller, "because the people believe that they will be better served by licensing especially prepared experts . . . The licensed monopolies which professions enjoy constitute, in themselves, severe restraints upon competition. But they are restraints which depend upon capacity and training, not special privilege. Neither do they justify concerted criminal action to prevent the people from developing new methods of serving their needs . . ."

The justice noted that doubts of the adequacy of the medical professions to supply the needs of the community were found among both laity and physicians. The profession, he commented, is like others, which confront "profound changes in social and economic conditions."

Lawyers, for example, said the court, have lost revenue because work which used to be theirs is now done by trained business employes on salary. Moreover, courts have been set up which "expressly discourages" the activity of lawyers—such as the Small Claims Court in Washington.

Not Excluded By Law

And whether wisely or not, said the court, the Congress has determined that the practice of medicine is a trade, subject to the antitrust laws. Congress could have excluded the profession from such laws, the court conceded, but it did not. Accordingly, enterprises—such as cooperative groups—which undertook to develop new methods of dealing with the business of supplying professional medical service, must be left free of "unreasonable restraint."

"The appellants have open to them," Justice Miller remarked, "the safer and more kindly weapons of legitimate persuasion and reasoned argument, as a means of preserving professional esprit de corps, winning public sentiment to their point of view or securing legislation. But they have no license to commit crime. When they go so far as to impose unreasonable restraints, they become subject to the prohibition of the Sherman Act."

Joseph Keefer's Body to Arrive In D. C. Today

The body of Joseph I. Keefer, former vice president of the Oldest Inhabitants Association and a member of Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, for 42 years, and of the Sons of the American Revolution, is expected to arrive from New York today. Funeral arrangements will be made later.

Mr. Keefer, who was 92, died at St Vincent's Hospital in New York Sunday night following an accident several days before. His daughter, Miss Ethel Keefer, and his son, Edward A. Keefer, were notified of the accident by the Columbia Typographical Union.

As an Oldest Inhabitant, Mr. Keefer often lectured on Washington. He was said to be a nephew of Mary Ball, George Washington's mother. His Washington address is listed as 607 Independence Avenue. He was a native of Loudoun County, Va.

licity committee. "To be called disloyal seems to us to be an insult and a slanderous accusation, for among our members are men who served in the last war, men who at the present time have sons and brothers serving in this war, men who have bought war bonds and are still buying them."

The strikers, who met this morning to confer on the WLB order to return to work so that the mill could resume production on war orders, declared that the mill operations at present included less than 5 per cent war work.

The strikers are members of the Independent Loomfixers Union affiliated with the American Federation of Textile Operatives.

Approximately 35 per cent of the company's business is in war orders, but Ernest Kirby, plant superintendent, said that it was operating today at only 20 per cent of capacity, with only 226 looms out of 1048 in production.

The loomfixers seek a wage increase of approximately $3 a week, which would raise their pay to $35. The entire plant employs 1280 workers, most of whom are idle because of the work cessation.

Strike Cuts Work At Shipbuilding Plant

Point Pleasant, W. Va., June 15 (AP).—A walkout curtailed operations today at the Marietta Manufacturing Co. plant, builder of cargo-going vessels for the Army and Navy.

President C. O. Weissenberger said that "quite a few men" from among the estimated 2000 employes had quit their jobs, but he denied a statement by L. J. Callinan, A. F. L. spokesman, that the shutdown was "96 per cent effective."

Callinan, editor of an A. F. L. labor weekly newspaper at Charleston, charges in a statement that the company had defied Army and Navy rulings, Department of Labor rulings and War Board instructions, and was seven months behind schedule on war orders.

Callinan said that the workers deemed it a "patriotic duty to see to it that these obstacles to production are cleared up." Weissenberger said that the employes thus far had made no demands, and added that except for one unit, on which production is less than 30 days behind schedule, production is normal.

men were rescued.

Survivors of the larger American craft, sent to the bottom June 1 south of Cuba, twice outargued would-be rescuers to wave them out of the danger area. Fifty-three men then made port in two lifeboats. Second Mate William J. MacCarthy of New York City said both attempted rescues were made by Brazilian ships but that the men finally persuaded the two to get out of the danger zone. Two seamen were killed in the sinking.

Argentine maritime police reported the torpedoing of the 9234-ton South Africa and said that 23 survivors refused rescue by an Argentine tanker which sighted their lifeboat off the northeast coast of South America. An official announcement said the men were given food but declined to board the passing vessel.

Three Women Among Survivors

From an East Coast Canadian port came word of the landing of 25 survivors of a ship sunk in the Atlantic. Three women were reported in the group.

Meanwhile, 13 seamen from a medium-sized freighter whose sinking was announced last Thursday landed at an eastern port and told how the submarine's crew apologized for killing some of the freighter crew. One of the U-boat's officers also told the survivors that "Germany and America should not be fighting each other." Before submerging his craft, the officer discussed the merits of American and German beer with the victims.

Army Aide Claims Patent Rights for Direction Finder

Claiming that he perfected a radio direction finder before a patent for a similar device was issued to a German inventor in 1938, Paul B. Taylor, now assigned to an Air Corps laboratory, asked District Court yesterday to compel issuance of the patent to him.

Taylor contends that the United States Patent Commissioner denied the patent to him in 1937. Wilhelm Runge, to whom "priority of invention" was later awarded, assigned rights to the finder to the Telefunken Gesellschaft, a Berlin telegraph company, according to Taylor.

J. F. Mothershead, an attorney in the Department of Justice, is representing the American inventor.

10 Flying Officers Given High Rank

LIEUT. GEN. DELOS C. EMMONS

MAJ. GEN. JOSEPH T. McNARNEY

COL. E. S. PERRIN | COL. WILLES H. HALE | BRIG. GEN. RALPH ROYCE

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated ten officers of the Army Air Force and two Navy officers for high rank.

Among the Army fliers promoted was 36-year-old Col. Edwin S. Perrin, a West Point graduate of 1930 whose permanent rank is that of captain. Perrin was elevated to brigadier general, becoming the Army's youngest general. He holds an air post overseas.

Emmons Jumped 2 Grades

Maj. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, 48, Army deputy chief of staff, was promoted to lieutenant general, while Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, 53, Army commander in Hawaii, was jumped from colonel to major general on the permanent Army rolls.

ant general is temporary. His jump promotion on the permanent list was regarded as reflecting the satisfaction of the high command with the way he has strengthened Hawaii's defenses since he took command after the December 7 raid on Pearl Harbor.

All the other Army promotions were temporary. They included:

Brig. Gen. Ralph Royce, 51, commander of the air force which raided Jap bases in the Philippines early this spring, to be a major general.

Hale's Exploits Recognized

Brig. Gen. Willis H. Hale, 49, of Washington, D. C., who commanded the Army bombers in the recent Battle of Midway, to be a major general. Hale's promotion was regarded not only a reward for the severe damage his planes did to the Jap fleet, but led to speculation that he might be assigned as commander of the Army air force in Hawaii, as successor of Maj. Gen. C. L. Tinker, lost in the battle.

Two Navy captains were nominated to be rear admirals, Daniel J. Callaghan and Theodore S. Wilkinson.

Callaghan, 51, former aide to President Roosevelt and now chief of staff to Vice Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, commander of United States naval force in the New Zealand area, receives a temporary advancement.

Wilkinson, 53, who already held temporary rank as rear admiral, was named for permanent flag rank. He is assistant chief of naval operations for Information and Security.

Comdr. Gail Morgan of the Navy was also nominated to be a captain.

Whitehead Becomes General

The other Army air force colonels nominated for brigadier general were:

Ennis C. Whitehead, 46, a World War I flier now serving overseas.

Kenneth N. Walker, 43, who also served as a pilot in the last war. He is serving with the General Staff here.

Carl W. Connell, 52, of Leesburg, Va., a flier in 1918, who is now overseas.

Albert L. Sneed, 58, a West Point graduate of 1908, who was retired from the Army in 1938, but recalled to active duty. Sneed is now serving overseas.

Nathan F. Twining, 44, now serving here as assistant executive to Lieut. Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander of the Army Air Force.

Meetings will be held each Tuesday and Thursday afternoon until June 25, when a final big rally is planned and awards of camp scholarships, cash prizes and sports equipment will be made to the victorious squad and individual boys.

American Ship Vanishes in New Mystery of Sea

New Orleans, June 15 (AP).—A wartime mystery of the sea was revealed here today in the disappearance of the New Orleans freighter Miraflores of the Standard Fruit & Steamship Co. The ship is unreported since February 15 when last sighted off the coast of Haiti.

The vessel, of 2158 gross tons and 270 feet long, sailed from here February with her crew of 34 on a routine voyage to Haiti before the Axis submarine campaign grew to menacing proportions in the area.

The missing Miraflores recalled to shipping circles the unsolved mystery of the Cyclops, a United States Navy collier which disappeared in 1918 during World War I en route from Brazil to the United States with a cargo of manganese. No trace of the ship or crew was ever found.

Capt. Robert Thompson of New Orleans was master of the Miraflores.

Retailers Warned to Equalize Flow of Goods

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Nation's retailers yesterday were warned by a top War Production Board official that they face Government control of their inventories unless record accumulations of consumer goods are fairly distributed among all stores and all communities—large and small.

"Some form of balance in the retail inventory picture (stocks of merchandise on hand) will have to be achieved soon," Joseph L. Weiner, deputy director of WPB's Division of Civilian Supply, declared in an address prepared for delivery to a National Retail Dry Goods Association meeting in Chicago.

"Perhaps that can be done by the good judgment and foresight of the retail trade itself," he said. "Perhaps it will require that the Government step in with some form of inventory control plan which will enable the retail trade to achieve balanced inventories."

Some Can't Get Stocks

Weiner asserted that "there is reason to believe that many of the smaller retailers and neighborhood stores have had trouble replenishing their stocks" from the highest retail and wholesale inventories in the country's history.

Storekeepers in war areas, Weiner disclosed, have complained that they have been unable to put in adequate stocks.

"Vigorous buying" by larger independent and chain stores, Weiner stated, is believed by "informed people" to be responsible, in some degree, for the failure of small retailers to obtain adequate stocks.

Warning that "if this is true, then, the months ahead will have to see some equalizing of inventories," Weiner asserted that there "must" be an end to "certain practices which have threatened to have a choking effect on equitable distribution."

"There must be an end," he said, "to hoarding by which some retail warehouses are crammed with 8, 10 or 12 months' supplies of certain articles while some of the stores in other cities cannot get stocks of these goods for their customers.

"If people around the country get the idea that the smaller retailer is being squeezed too much, they will certainly be up in arms about it, and all retail trade will get a black eye."

Production Heroes to Get Gold Awards

The War Production Board has arranged to decorate war plant workers for individual contributions to better and faster production much in the way the armed services make awards to soldiers for heroism in battle.

War workers, it was announced yesterday, are eligible for three types of awards in recognition of the value of suggestions they are being urged to make in the campaign for more weapons in less time from the same number of machines and the same amount of material.

The awards are to be made as a phase of the production drive launched last March by WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson through labor-management committees now operating in 900 war plants employing two million workers. The company president as well as his lowest-paid employe may receive the awards.

An award of Individual Production Merit may be made by the plant committee whenever it "receives a suggestion which improves quality or production, or conserves critical material, or in other tangible ways increases the effectiveness of the war production."

"An outstanding suggestion which is adopted and proves of value in the plant" makes the originator a candidate for a higher award—Certificate of Individual Production Merit. The certificate will be awarded from Washington after the suggestion has been considered by production drive officials.

The highest award will go to the worker whose suggestion means improvement in—the war effort of the entire Nation. It will be known as the Citation of Individual Production Merit. This award will be made by Nelson and, in addition to a certificate similar to those issued for lower awards, the worker will receive a gold pin.

In a speech dedicating Northwestern University's new Technological Institute, Nelson last night declared new relationships between management and labor being worked out by—joint committees to be—"one of the most exciting chapters" in the whole story of war production.

Newly Inducted Soldiers to Get 14-Day Leave

Those of 123 Negro men reporting to Fort Myer, Va., this morning, who pass final physical examinations prior to induction into the Army, will be the first selectees to benefit from the new system of granting 14-day furloughs at the option of the new soldiers.

Hitherto the system has been for selectees to report to Camp Lee, Va., where furloughs were extended to them only on recommendations of local boards. Usual length of such leaves was 10 days.

In addition, this morning's list of those reporting for final physical examinations prior to induction will be the last released for publication. In the future, only the names of those who pass their exams and actually are inducted will be given to newspapers.

Those who report this morning are:

Welfare Board Members Reappointed

In spite of the present feud between the Commissioners and the Board of Public Welfare, the commissioners yesterday reappointed three members of the Board for 6-year terms. These are James A. Councillor, A. J. Driscoll and Mrs. Radford Moses.

Driscoll has been a dissenting member of the board for some months in the struggle between the members and the Commissioners who last week introduced a bill into Congress to strip the Welfare Board of its plenary powers. Mrs. Moses was only appointed this spring to fill an unexpired term.

La Follette Assails Alcoa On 'Monopoly'

By the Associated Press

Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, told the Senate yesterday that a preventable shortage of aluminum forgings had held down the production of Martin bombers 20 per cent this year and urged the establishment of a Federal aluminum authority to direct all United States production of the metal.

Declaring that the aluminum program had been "warped by the overweening desire of private corporations to protect their postwar interests," La Follette told his colleagues the time had come for the Government to free itself of what he described as a "perfect monopoly" exercised by the Aluminum Company of America.

In a lengthy prepared address, the Senator asserted that the company had discouraged the production of independent aluminum producing facilities, had maintained "intimate and dangerous ties" with the I. G. Farben chemical trust of Germany until April of this year, and had minimized the shortage of aluminum in "overoptimistic, misleading advertisements and public announcements."

"Every day the aluminum crisis is allowed to continue, we are failing to produce planes and the United Nations are losing fighting men who died for lack of them," La Follette declared. "The shortage of aluminum forgings has already lost for us one out of five Martin bombers from this year's output."

La Follette alluded to a recent press statement he said was made by Glenn L. Martin, head of the aircraft company bearing his name, that the production of bombers was 20 per cent below capacity because his plant could not get all of the aluminum it needed.

"But the same day," La Follette said, "Jesse Jones assured the Senate Banking Committee that 'it looks like we are going to have ample aluminum.' Alcoa added to the confusion with the retort, "If Glenn Martin isn't getting his aluminum, the fault is somewhere else," intimating that the aircraft scheduling, unit of the WPB is at fault."

Henderson Hotly Denies OPA 'Politics'

Price Administrator Leon Henderson, seeking funds to expand his staff vastly for rationing and price regulation, yesterday hotly denied "politics" in OPA appointments, during testimony before a House Appropriations Subcommittee.

Henderson appeared before the subcommittee in executive session for the fourth time, in connection with a Budget Bureau estimate calling for 161 million dollars to expand Office of Price Administration personnel to some 66,000 workers.

The price administrator originally asked 210 million dollars for a staff of some 90,000 workers.

During yesterday's hearing, it was learned, Henderson was prodded by Republican members on alleged "political" appointments. G. O. P. members questioned selection of Kentucky's former WPA director to be State director for Henderson.

The price administrator reportedly told the subcommittee that he personally made all key appointments to his staff; that the State director in question was his own selection, and that "politics" had not and would not figure in appointments.

Although no action has yet been taken on the OPA appropriation, some members of the subcommittee are known to favor providing for the staff increase in part by a larger percentage of voluntary workers.

U. S. Economist Indicted in Rape Of Federal Girl

The District grand jury yesterday indicted J. Franklin Huber, 24-year-old "junior business economist" in the Office of Price Administration, on a charge of raping a stenographer, also of the OPA, in Rock Creek Park, May 31.

Huber, a former University of Iowa student, is said to have attacked the 20-year-old Government worker after they had gone to the park from a restaurant. The alleged victim testified at Huber's arraignment June 2 that he had offered her several drinks, which she refused. Huber lives at 5128 North Capitol Street.

Also indicted for rape was Isaiah Brooks, 33-year-old Negro of unknown address, who is charged with criminally attacking a 42-year-old woman in her bedroom.

A total of 58 indictments were returned yesterday. The others are:

Unauthorized use of an automobile, John Banks, Cole L. Smith, Fred J. Hurd, jr., Jesse F. Owens, Edward L. Schools, jr., and Harvey N. Byrd, whose indictment included also a charge of stealing automobile accessories; grand larceny, William E. Skinker, Harold C. Caspers, Nevitt Shacklett, Robert Deering, Tyler P. Burdett and James W. Torrence.

Davis and James Wallace; robbery, William Simpson, Roland Belton, Joseph C. Plaxco, James Wallace, Mary E. Maynard, St. Clair Mitchell, Isaac Kee and Jack Brown; assault with intent to kill, James Russell McGregor.

Collapsible Tanks Proposed to Ease Gasoline Shortage

Baltimore, June 15 (AP).—Collapsible fuel tanks of synthetic rubber that could transform railroad boxcars, trucks and wooden barges into tank cars and tankers to carry gasoline were described today by Glenn L. Martin.

These fuel tanks, already made experimentally, Martin said, are an adaptation from the self-sealing or bullet-proof gasoline tanks for airplanes.

The airplane manufacturer said that with them railroad box and gondola cars and trucks could transport gasoline overland to relieve the serious gasoline transportation problem and they could be fitted onto boats and wooden barges for intercoastal transportation.

Since the rubber tanks are collapsible, they could be rolled up into compact packages and expressed back with the railroad car or barge carrying freight back instead of making the return trip empty.

Standard Oil Denies Using Unfair Tactics

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, June 15.—Standard Oil Co. of California denied today charges by Petroleum Coordinator Harold L. Ickes that it evidently was using the wartime situation to improve its competitive position.

On the contrary, the company said in a statement issued by Walter J. Held, public relations executive, "Standard Oil Co. of California contends it has cooperated and contributed to the fullest extent to the war effort and to the stock situation in the Northwest."

Ickes, in a memorandum read to the Senate by Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri, charged Standard refused to provide cargo space for gasoline to be shipped by another company from Los Angeles to Tacoma, although it had more carrying capacity than it needed for its sales outlets in the Northwest.

"While this company elected to operate its own tankers instead of following the recommendation that all tankers be pooled," the company's statement said, ". . . no stock benefits in the Northwest accrued to the Standard Oil Co. of California as a result of operating its own fleet because it shared its stocks at Northwest marine terminals on a loan basis down to the last gallon with any and all companies marketing in that area.

"Insofar as Mr. Ickes' statement to the effect that Standard Oil Co. of California attempted to use the war situation to improve its competitive position in the Northwest is concerned, Standard Oil Co. of California denies this statement and on the contrary states definitely that since just prior to the first of this year, the time at which the lack of supplies became acute in Washington and Oregon, it declined to serve customers other than its own because, stocks being limited, it felt that to do so would be taking an unfair advantage of its competitors."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

If Boy Doesn't Meet Girl, It Will Be His Own Fault

Big, Free Show for War Services on Sunday; Washington Comedian Forming His Own Band; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

THE GREATEST "BOY-MEETS-GIRL" PRODUCTION in the history of "show business" will be presented in Griffith Stadium next Sunday afternoon. And for free.

While stage and screen are only incidentally and vaguely involved, the projected program combines so much that is dramatic, spectacular and exciting as to fall distinctly into the classification of "show business." Show business blown up, as the saying goes, to Gargantuan proportions—to match the dimensions of the audience that is expected to be in attendance.

MARLENE DIETRICH

There will be a girls' softball game, band music, pageantry, the personal appearance of numerous celebrities of national renown, solo artists of the first rank, a huge male chorus and, as the piece de resistance of the afternoon, a baseball game between service teams from Camp Lee, Va., and the Norfolk Naval Base, with Bob Feller the star of the latter.

And with the use of that word "service" we get around to the pith of the entire business.

The whole gigantic undertaking was conceived by Mrs. Morris Cafritz, chairman of the Special Events Committee of the Metropolitan Recreational Services for National Defense—and pardon me if I haven't got the name on quite straight—and is being executed by her, in association with Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Provost Marshal; the Office of Civilian Defense, draftees from the Washington "Green Book," under the subcommittee chairmanship of Mrs. Lionel Atwill; the press, the radio and who have you. The idea back of the whole thing is to provide an utterly gala opportunity for the service men in uniform—and the male Government workers out of uniform—and the girl workers in the Government to meet and have a whale of a time.

Every program feature is being contributed without cost and Clark Griffith has donated the use of his ballyard and all its facilities to further the success of the event. Which is why there are no costs to defray and the 30,000 or so tickets are being given away free to those engaged in the war effort to whom they will bring the most pleasure.

Among the stars of the program will be the Hon. Paul V. McNutt, Jane Pickens, brilliant soprano, now appearing at Del Rio; Clark Griffith, Gene Archer, Melvyn Douglas, a flock of bands and, of course, the ball teams, made up in large part of former major and minor league players. The greatest of these, as goes without saying, is Bob Feller. The boxes will be packed with officialdom and society.

The only bluebottle in the erntment that we can discern at the moment is that the capacity of Griffith Stadium won't be half big enough to accommodate the crowd that will want to get in. The mammoth goings-on will get under way Sunday at 1:45 p. m., with the main event ball game scheduled to start at 3.

Remember "Little Johnny" Puleo, the diminutive comedian with the genius for pantomime, who used to be the star of the harmonica band known as Borrah Minnevich and His Rascals? Well, after all these years Johnny has broken with his former boss and, after a protracted contract squabble, has been advised by his attorneys that the courts have declared him a free agent. So Johnny is organizing his own harmonica band and tells me by phone—the little rascal just hung up—that he will be ready to accept bookings within the next two weeks or so. With him in it, his band is a hit before it starts. Johnny's last appearance in Washington was on the screen with the Minnevich organization in "Always in My Heart," costarring Walter Huston and Kay Francis. Remember?

Washington Was Lucky

As we were saying at the time, the Capital was especially fortunate in getting the first peek at the first Hollywood Victory Caravan. They are still using the same name, but not the same formula, in rigging up the future tours of stars in behalf of war bond and stamp sales and the various relief agencies contributing to the war push.

For instance, the latest Hollywood project in cooperation with the Treasury Department contemplates the touring of 30 top film stars through 120 cities to reach an estimated audience of 35,000,000 people, but . . . Instead of sending the group out as one organized show, it is being split up into small units, each going in a different direction. The first recently left Hollywood for a junket into the Middle West. In it were Donald Crisp, Arleen Whelan, here with the first Caravan; Shirley Ross, Mary Howard, Gale Sondergaard and Mrs. Pat O'Brien. Marlene Dietrich was to join them in Chicago. After that, they were to break up into still smaller units and go their separate ways. The ultimate goal is $100,000,000 in bonds and stamps sold.

This afternoon at 4, Director William Wyler, for the second time in recent weeks, will be guest of honor at a private, preview screening of his production of "Mrs. Miniver," in the plushy projection room of the Paramount Film Exchange. Following the unreeling of this universally lauded picture, Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, will be entertaining Mr. Wyler at a cocktail party at the Variety Club in the Willard. More of this later.

Better-Late-Than-Never Note

Thanks, June, for finally getting around to that "What is so rare" thing we were mentioning a while back.

Queen of the Aircraft Workers

The Cross Roads Inaugurates Season Gaily With 'Papa Is All'

By Nelson B. Bell

"PAPA IS ALL." Charles Hohein, Neil Linger and George Hohein present the comedy in three acts and four scenes by Patterson Green. Directed by Paul Messink; setting by Neil Linger. At the Cross Roads Theater, Bailey's Cross Roads, Va.

—THE CAST—

Mama	Regina Shigo
Jake	Leroy Gainter
Brendle	Douglas Pendergast
Mrs. Yoder	Ruth May
Emma	Margaret Mansfield
Papa	Forney Reese

The Cross Roads Theater, sole survivor among the Capital's histrionic haymows, over at Bailey's Cross Roads in Virginia, last night inaugurated its sixth consecutive summer season with a splendid performance of Patterson Green's unique three-act comedy, "Papa Is All."

Last evening's interpretation of this simple, but difficult play, would have been highly commendable in any circumstances. Under those which actually prevailed, it was remarkable, stamping the Cross Roads acting forces as a group imbued with the real spirit of the theater.

Owing to a serious ankle injury sustained during the final dress rehearsal, Catharine Ryan was forced to withdraw from the cast and her place in the principal feminine role of Mama was taken on 24 hours notice by Regina Shigo, who fulfilled the theater's tradition that "the show must go on" by delivering a sensitive, quaintly humorous and deeply sympathetic portrayal of the part.

As revealed on the stage of the National Theater no longer ago than last November, "Papa Is All" is a play which relies less upon involved dramatic situations than upon the strange idiom, delicious accents and odd inflections of its dialogue for a steady flow of gentle and ingratiating humor that now and again becomes boisterously and genuinely hilarious. In the capturing of this essential and superlatively tricky quality of the work, the Virginia "straw hatters" proved themselves surprisingly proficient.

The Beast in the House

The story is a direct, interesting and sometimes exciting one, concerning itself with what to do about a domestic tyrant, who conceives himself to be an agent of God put on earth to stamp out evil where he finds it. To Papa Aukamp, the most rock-ribbed of the Mennonites, everything is evil that contributes to anything but his personal well-being and miserly wealth. His son and daughter are his slaves, deprived of even the meanest of the youthful pleasures, and his wife a convenient substitute for a couple of farmhands and a hired girl on his penurious lands. A crisis is reached in the household when filial rebellion breaks into open revolt and Jake seeks to avenge the spunky Emma's persecution by doing away with Papa before Papa can do away with her admirer. Jake's murderous intentions were of the best, but a shade faulty in execution.

How the supposedly deceased paterfamilias finally is hoist by his own petard and the kindly auspices of a State trooper comprises the point of the play and its delightfully retributive last act. It is all encompassed with a warmly human touch and a great economy of characters and "commodities of the theater." Only six characters appear in the single setting of the Aukamp kitchen.

Miss Shigo last evening followed closely in the footsteps of Jessie Royce Landis, who created the part, by making Mama the dominant character throughout the three acts. In voice, reading and appearance, she made Mama an appealing, believable and intensely sympathetic figure. The Papa Aukamp of the title, at best, is only a foil to accentuate the gentleness, the patience and the smouldering resentment of his wife. To this role Forney Reese, one of the most reliable of our resident actors, brought a malignant venom well in keeping with the part.

Support Maintains High Level

As Emma and Jake, Margaret Mansfield and Leroy Gainter give first-rate accounts of themselves in assignments designed to test the talents of the most gifted juvenile players, and Ruth May, as the garrulous Mrs. Yoder, who unwittingly precipitates the domestic cataclysm, is one of the comedy mainstays of the evening. Douglas Pendergast completes the cast in the lesser role of the understanding and helpful member of the constabulary.

Paul Messink's direction is true to the Theater Guild's original, and will bear riper fruits as the cast becomes more letter-perfect. Neil Linger has provided an ample kitchen setting quite in the atmosphere of the comedy.

The Cross Roads is to be congratulated upon so successful an inaugural under conditions that might have proved so much more unfortunate than they were. It is expected that Miss Ryan will be able to resume her place in the cast by the end of the current week.

Joan Sees Her Daughter as Star

Joan Crawford is one parent in who wants her daughter to follow in her footsteps. Most actors and actresses try to keep their children away from the stage or studio. But not Joan. The other day a friend, watching golden-haired Christina, now 3 years old, playing in Joan's garden, asked, "What do you want her to be when she grows up?"

"If she isn't an actress," Joan replied, "I'll be the most disappointed person in the world. I know that it's the most wonderful life a woman can have. I wouldn't have changed a minute in my life and I want Christina to experience what I have."

LEONARD LYONS

Departmental Memos

New York, June 15.

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT: Col. Bill Donovan, the coordinator of information, who made a tour of all the war fronts last year, now is out of the country on another secret mission . . . Other travelers of the week will be the dissension-breeders, Colonel Sanctuary of New York, and Lizzie Dilling of Chicago. They're going to Washington, under subpena to testify before the grand jury.

RUTH GORDON

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: Mayor LaGuardia and Alice Marble were at a luncheon last week to promote the National A. A. U. championships, which will be held at Randalls Island for Army Relief. The Mayor, who describes himself as "a timid person, accustomed to overstatement," spoke of the importance of sports in a war program and then discussed the OCD's fitness division. "We started it as an athletic program, but then the politicians got hold of it," signed the Mayor, "so it became an esthetic program—and Alice Marble and I wound up being wardrobe mistresses."

RADIO DEPARTMENT: John LaTouche, the lyricist who wrote "Ballad for Americans," wrote a radio show for the United States Army. His script concerned the defense of Bataan and Corregidor . . . LaTouche got into a cab to take him to 90 Church Street, where he was to deliver the script. En route, he reread it and became so enthusiastic about it that he delivered to the Army officials not only that manuscript, but also his application for enlistment as a private.

BOOK DEPARTMENT: Ruth Gordon, who has an article in the current Atlantic Monthly—the magazine which is publishing installments of her diary—lunched recently with Somerset Maugham. She told him that her diary notes are illegible and that only she can read them . . . "And do you still keep that diary?" asked Maugham . . . "Yes, but don't think you're going to get any publicity out of this luncheon today," replied Miss Gordon. "The last installment published covered the year 1924. And at that rate, the report of today's luncheon won't appear in print until 1960."

MOVIES: Jimmy Cagney was in Reuben's, discussing his friend, Gregory Ratoff. Cagney told of the time Ratoff invited him to the projection room to see a preview of a picture which he had directed and in which he also was appearing . . . While the movie was being shown, Ratoff watched himself on the screen, and muttered: "Tarreefeek. Mowvelous. Sansayshanul. How could sotch a megneefacent actor be in so much debt."

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: The Irving Berlin show, "This Is the Army," probably will raise more than one million dollars for Army Emergency Relief. The production cost will be, literally, nothing—because the sets, costumes, shoes and even the make-up were contributd. The show's administration personnel are all Army men. The nine new Berlin songs will be published and exploited by "This is the Army, Inc.," and the administrators will be Army men—including the seven song-pluggers . . . Paramount paid $250 000, as an advance, for the movie rights. The picture will be made by Irving Berlin and Mark Sandrich, without salary. And all the profits of the picture will be contributed by Paramount to the Army Emergency Relief.

MECHANICS DEPARTMENT: Sam Jaffe, the actor, visited Ferenc Molnar, the playwright, and tried to induce him to take a plane ride with him. "I'll never go up in a plane," Molnar insisted . . . "But it's the best way of traveling ever invented," said Jaffe . . . "That may be. But I dont subscribe to new inventions," said Molnar. "The last invention I subscribed to was the elevator—and, at that, whenever I'm in one, I always stand near the door, to be the first one out."

RADIO DEPARTMENT: Two years ago Kyle Crichton, the movie editor of Collier's, was in Hollywood, where he started to interview Bob Hope. That interview never was published. "Hope is only a radio personality," Crichton explained, "and he isn't involved enough in pictures to warrant an article about him." . . . Mr. Crichton now is en route to Hollywood. One of the reasons for the trip is the movie story he has written and hopes to sell—a story for Bob Hope.

'Tish' Antique Set Mocks Priorities

Hollywood may worry about priorities for movie settings, but there's one set at M.-G.-M. that brings about no such headaches. In fact they call it the "no-priorities" set.

This particular one represents Marjorie Main's home in "Tish," filmization of the adventures of Mary Roberts Rinehart's beloved fiction character. Miss Main plays the title role.

Practically everything in the set is an antique. The quaint parlor contains Colonial furniture of the Governor Winthrop period. Odd little procelain statues, wax flowers in a glass globe, Currier and Ives prints on walls covered with old-fashioned wall paper, chintz curtains, are among the details. Old silver table utensils, rococo boxes on the parlor table, old-fashioned andirons are details of the supposed small town home in New England.

Check by Director S. Sylvan Simon disclosed that not an article in the set was manufactured later than 1901.

Mickey Goes Mayfair for Second Time

Hollywood, Calif., June 15. Mickey Rooney, in "A Yank at Eton," got a whiff of English life and liked it, and has gone overboard about it. Which means Metro is whipping up "National Velvet" so that Mickey will have a chance to ride in the Grand National. And who do you think is doing the screen story? None other than Sally Benson, who wrote "Junior Miss." Producer Pan Berman has been given carte blanche and and will give it the works. If Mickey keeps on building up god will they'll crown him or something—and I don't mean with a baseball bat!

MICKEY ROONEY

Just because Mickey's wife went to visit her mother, who's seriously ill, and Mickey moved in with his mother, the town's got 'em separated. It isn't so. Mickey likes his swimming pool and horses, and that's why he's left his apartment while Ava's away.

Claudette Colbert has moved out of her big house in Holmby Hills and right into an apartment. Says she can't bear rattling around in the house alone since the doctor's gone to war.

When I saw Ilka Chase dining with Herr Lubitsch, I wondered whether she was aiming to be in his next picture. I asked Lubitsch, who said, "No, she was inviting me for a spot on the Air."

Ilka says that because she looks so much like Colbert, her part is now that of Claudette's sister in "No Time for Love"—which is pure, unadulterated self-flattery on Ilka's part—and malice, but not pure, on mine!

Mrs. Irving Berlin flew out here to attend the funeral of Max Winslow, and flew right back to New York. Irving was desolated because he couldn't come, too, but he's neck deep in that big soldier play which opens on Broadway July 4.

And what a sight! Jock Whitney making his entrance to the Derby on one of those motor skooters, and then having his block-length limousine following behind with his entire staff. Jock was so intrigued with the skooter he tried to buy half a dozen to take back East.

He left immediately for a short Mexican trip, and will soon be Army bound as Capt. Jock Whitney.

When I saw David Selznick and Nelson Poynter of Washington, D. C., who's here getting studios to put their biggest stars in one-reelers for the Government, I thought what a mighty entertaining film it would be if David spliced together the tests he made of the gals for "GWTW."

Boy! That would entertain not only Hollywood, but our armed forces everywhere. Afterthought — it might be tough on the girls, however.

When I heard that Oscar Levant, who came out from New York to do "No Time for Love" was out of it, and Richard Haydn was in, I sensed a story and immediately called Levant, hoping for something hot. What a letdown! He had gotten time off from "Information, Please" on the radio to do the picture, which was postponed three times. They wanted him for seven weeks—he could stay only five. "And," said he, "it was the best part I ever had."

So he and his family are just vacationing on Paramount's time. I asked what he'd been doing betwixt times. "Well, when I arrived I called up Harpo Marx, asked him to come over." "And who else?" "No one," said Oscar, "you see, I wanted all my friends to be there at the same time."

Connie Russell and Red Skelton composed the song "Not So Dipsy Doolittle" which Red will sing on his radio show.

Connie, not quite 18, was in the studio classroom doing her geometry lesson when a police escort called for her to whisk her down to the Shrine auditorium for a benefit. Warners want to borrow her for the Eddie Cantor picture.

Nice to know that Helene Costello, who recently filed a bankruptcy suit here, has gotten a part in "The Black Swan." Nice, too, that she's making a comeback, because she was ill for so long.

Texas' Midshipman Maxson Wins 3 Honors; Naval Academy Holds First June Week Parade

By Malcolm G. Douglas
Post Staff Writer

Annapolis, Md., June 15.—Twenty-three awards and prizes to midshipmen for proficiency in academic work and athletics to be made at the first full-dress parade during June week, were announced today at the Naval Academy.

Willis Edward Maxson 3d, Austin, Tex., regimental commander of this year's graduating class, was named three times, and Midshipman John Tyler Shepherd, Seattle, Wash.; William Richard Riblett, East Detroit, Mich., and Victor Kennicott Atkins, Long Beach, Calif., twice each.

Along with Midshipman Shepherd four others will receive letters of commendation from the superintendent, Rear Admiral William R. Beardall, as members of the graduating class, "who have contributed most by their officer-like qualities and positive characters to the development of naval spirit and loyalty within the regiment." They are Stanley Joseph Cowin, jr., Orono, Me., commanding the winning "color" company; John Peter Harrell, Ardmore, Okla.; William Thompson Peach 3d, Newark, N. J., and Donald Edward Perry, Manchester, N. H.

Maxson Wins Sword

Midshipman Maxson also received the Class of 1897 sword, and the Fleet Reserve Association prize for standing highest in conduct and aptitude. In addition to the superintendent's letter, Midshipman Shepherd will have his name inscribed on the General Society, Sons of the Revolution Cup for proficiency in practical ordnance and gunnery.

Midshipman Riblett received the Military Order of Foreign Wars prize for standing highest in his class in mathematics; and the National Society, Daughters of Founders of the American Revolution prize for proficiency in practical and theoretical navigation.

Midshipman Atkins, standing highest for the course in the department of marine engineering, received the Class of 1924 gold watch; the life membership in the United States Naval Institute for attaining the highest merit in electrical engineering.

Georgian is Best Shot

For outstanding proficiency in the use of the service rifle, Merril Homer Sappington of Barnesville, Ga., is awarded the Secretary of the Navy's rifle trophy. Midshipman Sappington was captain of the 1942 rifle team and a member of the All-American rifle squad of the National Rifle Association.

The foremost pistol shot in the class is David Sloane Stanley, San Marino, Calif., and he receives the Secretary of the Navy's Pistol Trophy.

Funds from the class of 1871, with the understanding that the recipient will purchase a Navy dress sword, will be given to Leslie Richard Hesselton, jr., San Diego, Calif., for proficiency in practical and theoretical ordnance and gunnery.

For showing the greatest improvement in the department of marine engineering, Samuel Wendell Williston Shor, Cold Spring, N. Y., is awarded the Comdr. James Edward Palmer binoculars.

Inter-class sailing honors go to James William Herring, Sayville, N. Y., winning the Col. Robert M. Thompson binoculars.

Kirtland Gets Binoculars

For excellence in seamanship, Robert Adikes Kirtland, Flushing, N. Y., wins the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, Prize, a pair of binoculars.

Proficiency in "rules of the road" gains for William McKnight Pardee, Atlanta, Ga., the wrist watch of the National Woman's Relief Corps, auxiliary to the Grand Army of the Republic.

Two honors for midshipmen of the third class were also announced in the list. These going to Ernest Jerome Zellmer, Wauwatosa, Wis., for excellency in physics, and Henry Arthur Elmstad, Multnomah, Oreg., for second place in this year's interclass sailing.

These awards, as well as others to be announced later, will highlight the presentation of prizes and awards dress parade Wednesday at 5:30 p. m. on Wordan Field.

Broadcast to Brazil

Officials of the Inter-American Affairs Committee arranged details here today for the broadcast Friday night of Admiral Beardall, who will exchange greetings with Admiral Joaquin Corderio-Guerra, commandant of Brazil's naval academy, Escola Naval, by short wave. Admiral Beardall will talk in English and Dr. Julio Barata, coordinator of the committee's Brazilian section, will translate his remarks into Portuguese. Admiral Guarra will then reply from Rio de Janeiro.

Newsreel and press photographers will make pictures during the broadcast for all Brazilian theaters and newspapers.

Last night Comdr. Felix Johnson, Admiral Beardall's senior aide, was interviewed by Doctor Barata in a program to Brazil. Commander Johnson was a member of the United States naval mission to Brazil in 1936 to 1938.

Announcement was made here today that the names of the three midshipmen standing highest in this year's graduating class, as well as others attaining scholastic distinction, would be made public tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Hundreds Thrilled

Several hundred visitors to the Naval Academy were given thrills this morning when high winds and choppy seas made the sailing and navigation drills on the Severn tests calling for experienced seamanship. Sail boats were dipping their gunwales under water and the snap of their sheets going about sounded like rifleshot.

The drill events will be continued tomorrow morning. In the afternoon from 2 to 8 o'clock, Mrs. Robert Marshall, chief hostess for the academy, will conduct the first class' picnic. The "N" dance, for winners of Navy letters, will be held tomorrow night at the boathouse, Hubbard Hall.

Davison Wins Right to Run Against Smith

Emmett C. Davison, former Alexandria mayor, was formally accepted as a candidate to oppose Representative Howard L. Smith for the Democratic nomination for Representative for the Eighth Virginia Congressional District when his petition of candidacy was approved yesterday by the District Democratic Committee.

After more than three weeks of controversy, Davison's campaign manager, Thornton J. Goods, established the validity of 251 signatures on the candidate's petition, to comply with electoral regulations requiring a minimum of 250 signers certified as qualified voters. Davison's original petition contained 359 names.

Committee Chairman Gardner L. Boothe said the required number of signers was certified as qualified voters to the committee's satisfaction, not only through compliance with poll tax requirements, but through the fact that sufficient evidence had been presented that all had registered with their respective election officials.

Previously, Representative Smith had certified more than 350 names on his petition, Boothe declared, and the names of both candidates will be certified immediately to registrars in all counties and cities comprising the Eighth District.

The validity of nearly 200 names on the Davison petition was questioned by the committee two weeks ago, when Goods was informed the responsibility for certifying the petition rested with the candidate's campaign organization.

Goods said questions over the petition's validity arose from the fact that many voters signed the indorsement differently from the manner in which their names are registered with election officials, in many instances using initials on the petition when their full names were registered officially. Some errors, he added, were made when illegibly written names were transcribed from the original petitions to typewritten lists.

'Good Old Summertime' Bad For The Hair, Says Specialist

F. D. JOHNSON

Many people complain about hair and scalp trouble during the Summer months, says F. D. Johnson, local hair and scalp specialist.

There is no other season when one subjects the scalp and hair to so many abuses. Over-exposure to the sun bleaches the hair, leaves it dry, brittle and lifeless. Alkalies from salt water and chlorine from pool bathing also are drying agents. After bathing in either, a thorough rinsing with fresh water is recommended.

Excessive perspiration which keeps the scalp continually damp is aggravating to some scalp conditions. Those who suffer from dandruff, itching scalp and hair loss may find the conditions to become progressively worse as the Summer progresses. Under such conditions corrective measures should be undertaken. If you need help or further advice, call at 1052 Shoreham Bldg. The fees for service are moderate and payable as the treatment is taken . . . no advance payment required. Phone NA. 6081.

Peanut Man Finds King 'A Good Boy'

that time has given annually his receipts for two days, replied that business was "good."

The two men concluded the interview in their native language. Vasilakos told the King he was "making a living" at his peanut stand.

"Good boy," replied King George heartily.

"I think you are good boy yourself," retorted Vasilakos. "You are King, but you look like a 20-year-old youth."

He didn't tell the King about his son in the Greek army or the son, on the Athens police force, because "nobody knows about anybody in Greece nowadays."

He confessed later that he thought the 60-year-old ruler looked about 48, "but he's a good boy," he repeated.

Still Rates President First

And then, turning to those around him, he added:

"But mind you, I still hold firmly to my belief that President Roosevelt is the best man in the world.

"President Wilson sent the German Kaiser into what you call exile. I am convinced President Roosevelt will do more than send Hitler to the same place."

Before leaving Blair House Vasilakos met the Greek Prime Minister, Manuel Tsouderous, and asked the cabinet minister to convey to King George "my wishes for an early victory."

New Committee on Nursing Problems Will Meet Today

The committee of seven named by Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, to deal with nursing problems in the District will hold its first meeting today at 2 p. m. in the health department's conference room in the New Administration Building.

Approval of the committee's membership, which is composed of nurses and officials of four District hospitals, the Graduated Nurses Association, the Nurses Examining Board and the United States Public Health Service, was announced yesterday by the Commissioners.

The members are: Miss Genevieve Wilson, superintendent of nurses, Garfield Hospital; Sister Rosa, superintendent of Providence Hospital (Sister Rita, alternate); Miss Edith Beattie, secretary, D. C. Graduate Nurses Asociation; Miss Ashby Taylor, president, D. C. Nurses Examining Board; Miss Pearl McIver, nursing consultant, U. S. Public Health Service (Miss E. C. Through 130 Years of Peace and War

ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY years ago today, on June 16, 1812, The City Bank of New York was chartered by Act of the General Assembly of the State. It succeeded to the business and banking house of the New York office of Alexander Hamilton's first Bank of the United States, chartered by Congress in 1791 but closed in 1811. Colonel Samuel Osgood, a commander of Minute Men at Lexington, and first Postmaster General of the United States, became the President of the new bank.

Only two days later, on June 18, the United States was at war. To the ensuing war loans the new bank, with a total capital of $800,000, subscribed, for itself and its customers, $1,000,000.

This beginning was prophetic. In six wars the City Bank has supported the Government in its war efforts with its own funds, through the sale of bonds to its customers, and by the personal service in the armed forces of many hundreds of its staff.

After the War of 1812 came the financing of the Mexican War in 1846. Then in August, 1861, after the battle of Bull Run, the President of the City Bank was Chairman of a committee of New York bankers which advanced to the Treasury $50,000,000 at once and $100,000,000 more in two installments. When the national banking system was organized to support the war effort, the City Bank joined the new system and became The National City Bank of New York.

To finance the Spanish War in 1898, this Bank headed syndicates to underwrite Government loans.

In World War I the Bank participated fully in the great Liberty Loan campaigns. It supplied personnel to aid the Treasury, made its facilities available to solicit and receive subscriptions, and subscribed heavily for its own account.

Today, in a war demanding an even more stupendous national effort, the resources of the City Bank for the sixth time are mobilized to support the Government. Since Pearl Harbor, it has subscribed for itself and its customers for more than one billion dollars of Government securities. Its advice to its customers is the same advice it has given in every other war—the bonds of the United States have been, and are, the best investment in the world.

In the financing required to convert manufacturing companies from peacetime to vastly expanding war production, the Bank is doing its full share. Of the staff, over 600 members are in the armed forces. Others are serving many war agencies.

In drawing together the funds of hundreds of thousands of people, this Bank accepts a high responsibility. Its continuing purpose is to discharge faithfully its obligations to its customers and to the public; to serve the needs of the nation in the emergency of war and, after victory, in the growth and progress of peace.

OCD's New Standards

The Office of Civilian Defense deserves credit for figuring out a simple but very effective way of boosting community preparedness. In order to qualify for OCD equipment, local defense officials throughout the country must now certify that they have enough trained volunteers to meet the newly jacked-up training standards of the OCD. Ostensibly these standards have been set to make sure that equipment available is used only by persons of sufficient training. This is a justifiable requirement, particularly in view of the fact that such equipment is limited in quantity. Moreover, it ought to contribute to a renewed enthusiasm for defense training.

For example, the District is supposed to get more than $50,000 worth of OCD equipment. At present, however, it is not known whether there are enough fully trained volunteer workers to meet OCD standards, and therefore to warrant the loan of that much equipment. There are, to be sure, nearly 60,000 registered volunteers. But it is no secret that a good many of these are well-intentioned persons without sufficient technical training in the services to which they have been assigned. After a recapitulation of training records by service heads it may be found that the District is definitely entitled to considerably more OCD equipment than has been temporarily allocated. But in any case the emphasis from now on is bound to be on more thorough defense preparation.

Dr. Paul A. Douglass, the head of civilian defense schools here, has the right idea in stressing that we now have to get away from the idea of signing up volunteers just to make them realize we are at war, and concentrate instead on acquiring a hard-hitting, technically trained protective staff. This is so essential, if the District is to be properly prepared to cope with disaster, as to call for a thoroughgoing review of existing ratings among civilian defense registrants.

Bir Hakeim

The place called Bir Hakeim or, as the Germans write it, Bir Hacheim, does not appear in any ordinary atlas. It is probably little more than a few humps of sand and a water hole. But it is a name that later generations of Frenchmen may one day put on their monuments beside such names as Orleans, Fontenoy, Valmy and the Marne. For it was at Bir Hakeim in the North African desert that the first light-armored division of Free French forces under the Alsatian general, Koenig, for two weeks beat off the well-nigh incessant attacks by Gen. Rommel's tanks, infantry and stukas. Again and again they refused demands for surrender. They were at last withdrawn on orders of the British.

Thus it was evidently the Free French who bore the fiercest brunt of the recent Libyan fighting. The full military significance of this magnificent resistance is not apparent in the communiques. Let us therefore elucidate. Bir Hakeim lies about 40 miles to the southwest of Tobruk. Any movement by Rommel against that seaport would be an extremely hazardous business so long as the Free French remained in position to disrupt his supply columns or to cut off retreat by his advanced forces. So, after the failure of his first drive against Tobruk, and the precarious and difficult position in which he then found himself, Rommel realized that the Italians could not be trusted to dispose of the Free French, and that before any further offensive could be attempted he must take Bir Hakeim at all costs. The cost, as it proved, was heavy indeed—in time, materials and men. If, as seems not at all improbable, Rommel's African offensive was to have been keyed to the long-awaited German offensive in the Eastern European theater, then the Free French garrison of Bir Hakeim succeeded, as a British communique suggests, in upsetting the whole German plan.

This is by no means the first instance in which the Free French have given heroic and invaluable aid to the cause of the United Nations. Yet their status remains ambiguous and anomalous. The North African episode gives special point to the recent observation of General De Gaulle that "to restrict fighting France to an exclusively military organization is to ask them (the Free French) to furnish the dead and wounded of the battlefields, those who die before the firing squads, without France's deriving any national advantage among the democracies."

How Much Sugar

The public has so far accepted sugar rationing with good grace and has shown little disposition to question its necessity. But if the authorities are not careful they may soon find their task made much harder by the opposition of skeptics who have been led to believe that rationing is either unnecessary or too stringent. Failure to give the public a clear picture of the causal connection between local gas shortages and inadequate transportation has been largely responsible for the resentment aroused by the Eastern Seaboard gas-rationing program. A similar failure to impress the public with the decisive role played by transportation in limiting sugar supplies is likely to produce an equally unfavorable popular reaction.

Government officials, it seems, disagree as to the adequacy of sugar supplies. And as usual they are airing their differences in public, instead of reaching an agreement in private and then presenting the public with a program that has the unqualified support of all Government agencies. As a result, we read one day that a "confidential" Government survey shows that sugar on hand and available from nearby sources is more than a million tons above normal domestic consumption. The next day the Department of Agriculture reports that the United States supply of sugar may be the smallest in over 20 years.

The fact is that supplies of sugar at home and in foreign ports are expected to be quite large. But the United States is dependent upon imports, and so it does not follow that available supplies will be abundant. During the current year the domestic beet and cane sugar crops will cover just about one-third of our normal sugar consumption. The question at issue, therefore, is how much of the sugar held in Cuban and other foreign ports can or should be brought into the country in the months ahead. That will depend upon the availability of shipping space and the extent of submarine depredations. Nobody really knows just how short our accessible supplies are going to be. But everybody ought to understand that physical supplies of sugar held outside the United States, which would normally be shipped here, are not a determinant of rationing restrictions.

In rationing, furthermore, the authorities not only have to plan for the immediate future, they have to consider the probable consequences of a long war that would aggravate our shipping difficulties. Dependent as we are upon outside sources of sugar supply, ordinary prudence enjoins the building up of reserve stocks of sugar within the country as a safeguard against future dearth. We conclude, therefore, that it is worse than idle to encourage public debate about the adequacy of sugar supplies and raise doubts about the necessity of rationing. For the issue is one that cannot be decided by an appeal to supply and demand statistics. It is a question which the authorities should decide after taking into account the competing war demands for limited shipping space.

Corporate Taxes

In taxing individuals we recognize the necessity of leaving them enough income after taxes to meet the demands of daily living. Indeed, the taxpayer would cease to be a source of revenue and become a public charge if the tax collector stripped him of funds required to keep him and his family from starving or freezing for lack of food, clothing and shelter. Similarly business corporations must have enough money left over after paying taxes to keep alive if they are to supply the Nation with munitions of war and essentials of civilian life.

That is the gist of the restrained message of warning sent by A. W. Robertson, chairman of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. to members of Congress. Mr. Robertson shares the general view that during the war excess profits should be taxed heavily and substantial levies should be laid on normal profits. But he doubts—with good reason—whether it is wise to impose a combined normal and surtax of 40 per cent on profits, after levying taxes up to 94 per cent in the top bracket on so-called excess profits.

April returns, Mr. Robertson says, show a net income for Westinghouse less than 50 per cent of that of a year ago after provision for taxes, despite a great rise in output. The profit, he says, is not enough "to pay even modest dividends to stockholders and continue reasonable wages to employes without considering the well-recognized necessity to make some financial provision to cover present and post-war conditions." That taxes must be pushed to the limit of capacity goes without saying. But when taxes are raised to a point at which those who invest their money in a company are deprived of even reasonable returns after expenses are met, the company in question is being taxed beyond its ability to pay.

When a company in this position needs additional capital for expansion purposes, none will be forthcoming from outsiders, and none will be on hand for self-financing purposes. In short, as Mr. Robertson says, there must be some money left after paying expenses (including taxes) to keep factory doors open and do the job that the Government wants done.

Our Reaffirmation

For the United Nations, now raised to 28 by the admission of Mexico and the Philippines, Sunday was a day apart, a day which was marked by a common reaffirmation of faith in the cause for which they are fighting. Throughout the Allied world free men and women joined in celebrating a truly United Flag Day. And, we dare say, the stout of heart living under tyranny, braving the wrath of their masters, listened in on Allied broadcasts of the ceremonies. Surely, for the enslaved peoples, there could have been no more eloquent or convincing statement of our main objective than was broadcast by the President. "We know," he said, "that man, born to freedom in the image of God, will not forever suffer the oppressors' sword. The peoples of the United Nations are taking that sword from the oppressors' hands. With it they will destroy those tyrants."

There, simply stated, is the task we have set for ourselves. It is a task requiring the fullest measure of support not only by the Allies but, as the President made clear, also by the millions in silent captivity. It is a task calling for supreme moral courage, faith, and understanding. Too often, in the day-to-day business of getting on toward our goal, there seems to be no place or time for reflection on the essential dignity of man. Yet for what are we fighting, if not for the restoration and preservation of that God-given dignity?

Draft Preferences

Members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee have given married men under 45 years of age about as satisfactory an over-all statement of draft intentions as may reasonably be expected at this time. They have reaffirmed congressional intent to preserve families intact as long as possible. They have emphasized that the controlling factor is not so much financial dependency as the status of a man as head of a family. And they have recommended continuation of the policy of taking unmarried men first.

Such a statement was badly needed. There is no question that most family heads eligible for the draft have found themselves in an increasingly difficult material and emotional predicament. Conflicting reports of Selective Service status have put many married men literally at their wits' end to know how to plan for the months ahead. For them the knowledge that they would definitely be called for military service by such-and-such a date would be distinctly preferable to continued uncertainty.

For all the congressional assurances, however, there can obviously be no specific statement as to who will be inducted, or when. Man power requirements inevitably depend on the course of the war. All that Congress can do is indicate the broad outline of draft policy, without interfering in the least with the basic principle of the Selective Service Act that each case must be considered individually.

The Army does possess figures, however, showing the average physical fitness of men in specific age groups. If it becomes necessary to induct many more married men—and it is only sensible to proceed on this assumption—then there ought to be advance notice, the sooner the better, of the age order which will prevail in drafting heads of families.

Starving Greeks

In his address to the American Congress yesterday King George II of the Hellenes recalled that heroic page in recent history when the Greek people under his leadership proved themselves worthy of their magnificent heritage and while fully aware of the misfortunes that awaited their country refused to bow the knee to the brutish aggressors. Today the heroic Greek people are literally starving by the hundreds. They need every bit of help they can get and even the trickle of food that has managed to get through with the consent of the Axis has resulted in a saving of many lives. But much more remains to be done. That is why the campaign recently launched by the Greek War Relief Association for funds that will enable food shipments to be sent to Greece is deserving of the fullest support. Every dollar made available for that worthy purpose helps save the lives of an Allied people who have made so great a contribution to the common cause.

FOR LIBERTY

The mills pound out their joyous song,
The anvils ring out clear and long,
And smokestacks rise where there were none,
The black smoke pours up to the sun
To tell the world that wheels still turn,
To make the steel, to melt and burn,
To forge the lance of victory,
To make the world sing liberty!

Sporadic Enforcement

I have a complaint against the manner in which the District police enforce the parking regulations.

There is a difference between a law and an enforced law. There are large areas where the affixed parking regulations are obviously ignored for days, giving a newcomer moral right to believe that they are not enforced. Then, it appears, sporadically the police descend and scatter a sheaf of parking violation tickets.

No one benefits from this method, except perhaps the policeman whose record shows a good crop—and the people who are paying his salary are not interested in this sort of proof of service. The automobile public is certainly not benefited; e. g., the "one hour parking" regulation is made so as to enable people to conduct business of short duration, but since the regulations are not enforced daily there is a new group of parkers daily, with the same resultant inconvenience to the general public.

The police should do a thorough, continued job, or let it alone. The present system is an annoying, minor persecution. TAXPAYER.

Heydrich's Assassin

In view of the fact that the assassins of Hitler's Hangman Heydrich have not been found or identified, there is a strong possibility that they were members of Mr. Hitler's own beloved Gestapo, who, through envy of Mr. Heydrich's ignominious position, coveted the job for themselves.

It would be true to the pattern of the Nazi "New Order" to slay innocent people for crimes which they themselves had committed.

Temperance

Training for war should be like training of a football team for the big game of the year. A boy who has to smoke and drink beer the night before the event is not the one who is to run the length of the field from kickoff to touchdown. It would be tougher than war but equally honorable if from now till some Christmas in Berlin and Tokyo the majority of the soldiers could conquer self-indulgence. Girls can use their influence in a quiet way because smoke and liquor are not natural but are acquired imaginary necessities.

Evening Shopping

May I take this opportunity to say I think the Thursday evening store openings are fine as it gives the poor overworked Government clerks a swell chance to shop and make lots of comparisons before finally making a purchase. I sincerely hope they will consider keeping the stores open many more nights each week, and I know my wishes must be echoed by many more tired unfortunates to whom this is a God-send. Here's to more leisurely night shopping.

Misfit Jobs

I'm one of the several thousand Government girl nieces, and today I heard something that amused me. The particular bureau I am in demands 300 more stenographers. "Truth is beauty," so I have read, so I hope I won't lose my job by giving some fact details. Through interviews with other girls I have learned that many, who previously held responsible positions, are experiencing much the same as I am. Fortunately or unfortunately, I am classified as a stenographer. Other than five years' experience in this work I have had three years of college. I came to Washington this past February, and since have been doing menial tasks a child could capably perform. Other than occasional typing, I have had possibly seven dictated letters, not enough to justify ample proof of efficiency. Here's where the laugh comes in. It takes a college education to efficiently staple and fold circular letter forms, work I perform almost daily, besides addressing and stuffing envelopes. Sometimes this monotony is broken by running an errand. Me, previous to coming here holding a postal clerk's position in a 25,000 populated Oklahoma town, congenially giving it up, anticipating something more dignified as a stenographer in Washington, D. C. But in spite of discouragement, I'm going to be a sticker to Uncle Sam. Just as courageous as our boys are fighting I want to approach my servile tasks each day with an attitude of accomplishing them with super-efficiency. Too, I wouldn't want our brave American soldiers who are risking all for my and your liberty to say, "Just another insignificant girl griping about a little misfit job. And us fighting for her." Forgive my complaining.

New Signs

When farmers are unable to get aluminum paint for their roofs and have great difficulty in getting lumber and metal to replace roofs which are beyond repair, I should like to have priorities officials explain how sign companies get sheet metal and aluminum paint for great advertising signs such as have appeared recently on the new defense highway between Morgantown Bridge and La Plata.

It takes gasoline, rubber, labor and defense materials to do this work. Why not use these to produce food and war supplies so gravely needed by our fighting men and the armies and navies of our allies?

Words Like Leaves

Here
On this page,
Are words as brown and weather-worn
As winter leaves beneath a spring-time tree;
Brittle, forlorn,
They have no juices in them,
Being too harsh for the silken sound
Of smooth, premediated speech,
They merely reach
The outer and immediate ear;

Old words have lied
Through every age,
And learned to hide
A shadowed beauty,
Letting it moulder in the sunless ground
Beneath

Here is a wreath
Of sentences . . . a page

Democracy Denied Odell Waller

I am writing this letter in the hope that a number of readers of The Post will feel moved to write to Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr., of Virginia urging the commutation of sentence of Odell Waller, a Negro who sits in the State prison at Richmond waiting to forfeit his life to the great Commonwealth of Virginia.

The life of one man may seem unimportant in a world where millions are dying, but Pearl Buck the noted writer has remarked "Odell Waller has ceased to be an individual; he has become a personification of all those to whom democracy is denied in our country."

Waller was a voteless sharecropper, too poor to qualify for full citizenship by paying the Virginia poll tax. In 1938 he went to work as a sharecropper on the farm of Oscar Davis. With him were his wife and mother. In 1940 after Davis had cut his acreage, Waller went to Maryland to work, leaving his wife and mother on the farm. He sent back money to pay a cousin for working in his place on the Davis land. The mother also worked for Davis, who refused to pay her and evicted the two women. On July 15, 1940, Waller came home. The next day he borrowed a truck and went to the Davis farm, with his mother and several others, to get his wheat, which had been held by Davis. Davis refused to surrender the wheat and in the quarrel which ensued, Waller shot Davis, who died two days later.

Pleading self-defense, Waller was tried for murder in September, 1940, before Judge J. T. Clement of the Circuit Court of Pittsylvania County, Va. After deliberating for 52 minutes, he was convicted by a jury of white poll tax payers, 10 of whom were of the same group of employing farmers as the man he shot.

Odell Waller had been denied the right to trial by a jury of his peers by the Commonwealth of Virginia. He had become a symbol of second-class citizens. In 1940 and 1941, before Judge J. T. Clement of the Circuit Court of Pittsylvania County, Va., almost an exactly similar case was tried. All the circumstances were the same with this exception, a white landlord named Sittle had shot a Negro cropper named Tom Denson. Only there was no quarrel, simply that Denson's truck had broken down near Sittle's home, and standing on a bank with a double-barreled shotgun Sittle had shot down Denson. A white jury, deliberating 15 minutes, found Sittle not guilty.

The Waller case has twice come before the Supreme Court and twice the court has refused to hear the case. John Dewey, America's greatest philosopher, warned in a letter to the New York Times that if the court dodged the issue of trial by one's peers, "the effect will certainly be to weaken the faith of the poor—and especially of poor Negroes—in the democratic process."

Typical of the reaction of leaders of the Negro community is the flat statement of A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, that "Negroes have no faith in American democracy at this time, and the execution of Odell Waller would tend to deepen their distrust of democratic institutions."

The one hope for justice now is that Governor Darden will commute Waller's sentence. By granting repeated reprieves while Waller's appeals were pending, Governor Darden has proved himself to be a generous and humane executive. He will unquestionably give serious consideration to public opinion in making his decision, and is bound to be influenced by the volume of protest that reaches his desk.

The committee working on behalf of Odell Waller urges you to add your voice to that of others in urging that Governor Darden will act consistently with justice and democracy.

Peas Of Gomorrah

We had a great delicacy for dinner last night—black-eyed peas. Civilization has committed another of its miracles when it can make a prized dish out of black-eyed peas, but I am ready to admit that with the proper amount of catsup they are palatable. Especially if you haven't had any for a long time.

It was the rarity, of course, that did it—as in the case of caviar before you could buy that for a thin coin in those familiar stores. I had the shock of my life this April when one of my friends suggested that I grow black-eyed peas in my back yard and let him peddle them for two bits a quart. For at my last remembering, peas like that grew in the field and were harvested in autumn for the livestock. If you got hard up for something to feed the family during the summer, you went out and picked some of them, but you never thought much about it.

It's hard to tell what happened to the black-eyed pea between my boyhood and the time it showed up in cellophane bags on the grocer's shelves. Even now it doesn't appear in Webster's Collegiate, although black-eyed Susan does, and it isn't mentioned in my seed catalogue. There was a time, however, when it formed one of the principal items of diet for the poorer families. It certainly didn't seem fit for gourmets then.

There was one family in particular, the Jorys. That wasn't their name, I'm sure, but it'll do. The Jorys grew those peas, or something like them, by the acre and every animate thing on that place lived off them—pigs, cows, chickens, mules and children. The Jorys were good people, and I recall now a feeling, uncommonly considerate for a small boy, that they deserved better than black-eyed peas.

But just to keep everybody's stomach full of something was all a farmer could hope for in those days. He hadn't ever heard of parity. He knew you could make alcohol out of corn and in many cases he did, but if you had spoken to him about butadiene he'd have said he didn't have any money for any more patent medicines, and synthetic rubber couldn't mean much to a man who would struggle all his life without the hope of owning a Model T automobile.

I don't mean to give the impression that the Jorys had absolutely nothing to eat except black-eyed peas. They must have had hog-meat, for instance, though I don't remember ever seeing any except for a little fat back in turnip greens. Surely they must have had corn on the cob, too, because they raised plenty of it, but that also escapes my mind. They kept cows, and hence I conclude they made butter, but skim milk is the only dairy product I can recall seeing on their table. Probably they used all the cream to make butter and then sold the butter. I know they had corn bread and sorghum, for everybody did. And even now I can see the sweet potato pies that were brought out as a great treat after Sunday dinner on days when we ate with them. Selfish and thoughtless, as children are, I felt dismally sorry for anybody who had so little sweetness in his life that he thought a sweet potato pie was good to eat. Home canned peaches were in the same category.

One thing that passed unnoticed then, however, has come back to haunt all my days: the look of abject dismay in the eyes of the six Jory children when my sister and I ate the drumsticks off the one chicken because we were the guests. It was nothing to me, and I was just passing a Sunday without getting quite enough to eat, but those boys and girls at their silent stations around the table were starving. More than once in the middle of an afternoon I have seen the littlest boy beg his mother for a piece of corn bread, which he spread with lard and gulped down. But even that was too scarce to be given lightly. Everything on the farm was hungry. When you went to slop the pigs they came at you as if they were going to bite your arm off, and the chickens would peck your fingers or toes if you didn't watch.

It just about drove the old folks crazy. Heaven knows it was enough. Mr. Jory was a devout Methodist even after his wife led him into the Episcopal Church, but when the plow struck a root and the two scrubby little mules balked at pulling any farther through the red-clay bottom, all the curses of Sodom and Gomorrah broke on their heads and shivered into the meager soil. A person had to understand the Bible in all its majestic and awful pageantry to exercise or appreciate such wrath.

The life they led gave Mrs. Jory an attitude of permanent degradation, so that she went around admiring other people's possessions, children and accomplishments by saying how much better they were than hers. Yet the Jorys weren't low people. The leading families of the community were their friends and neighbors, and their word was reckoned in the councils. The girls all went to the cities and married well, and the boys went away and they are doing well too. It was just that the land didn't hold a living for anybody any more. It took a New York, Wilmington or Detroit fortune to support a farm, and it wasn't long after that that nice people from outside began buying up the old places. But things work in such a cockeyed way that I expect to hear any day that one of the Jory boys has gone back to the farm and is cleaning up raising black-eyed peas to sell in quart baskets and one-pound bags.

Why Red Generals Were Shot

From Report to the Secretary of State — Moscow, July 28, 1937.

(IN CONNECTION with this dispatch, the sequence of events should be borne in mind. The Bukharin trial was not held until the following March, 1938. It was in this trial that detailed and specific charges were made for the first time against the Red army, implicating some of its leaders in "Fifth Column" activities. This dispatch was written before the Bukharin trial and while we were all in the dark. It indicates that many of us missed the real significance of these events, in relation to possible treason and collusion with Germany, which subsequent developments disclosed.)

JOSEPH E. DAVIES

Strictly Confidential.

Sir: Several weeks have now passed since the trial and shootings of the high officers of the Red army. It has occurred to me that it might be of some interest to you, and to the department, to have my analysis of what happened, from the vantage of this perspective, as well as my estimate of the significance and results of those events upon the present regime.

The execution of these officers, the flower of the Red army, occurred June 12. Events had moved with such lightning-like rapidity and terrific tragic force that for some time it seemed difficult to obtain a well-balanced judgment on the situation.

Both here and in Europe there were all sorts of rumors. Some of these were that there existed an overt plot in the Red army to overthrow the Stalin government; that a Bonapartist coup, with Marshal Tukhatchevsky as the Corsican, had failed; that there had been established a definite agreement between these Red army generals and the German Reichswehr to cooperate with Germany as part of an impending German putsch into the Ukraine; that this was part of a larger Trotsky plot for the purpose of destroying the Stalin regime through a foreign war so that a new buffer state between the Orient and Europe might arise therefrom to save "real" communism through the aid of the Red army; that Stalin was "the sick man of the Kremlin," who was suffering from a hysteria complex with mental aberrations of personal danger, which resulted in these shootings of all who threatened his prominence; that the army was engaged in a death struggle with the secret police, arising out of resentment by the army of espionage by the secret police over army officers; that the entire army was impregnated with anti-Stalin feelings, and was a hotbed of counterrevolution; that Voroshilov—commissar for defense—was also a suspect, and in danger of imminent execution.

THESE RUMORS and theories are an indication of the feverish attitude which would naturally be incident to a situation of so tragic a kind, and which was so completely enshrouded by lack of information.

The "sick man of the Kremlin" theory is quite universally discounted. Moreover, generally speaking, in diplomatic circles here responsibility for these executions, in a strictly personal sense, is not attributed to Stalin. He commands a great deal of respect, outside of these terrible happenings. The responsibility is generally attributed to the "action of the party" through its party leaders. Of course, in that connection, it is generally considered that Stalin is by far the strongest character.

As to the alleged guilt of these army generals of overt acts—actual conspiracy with the German government—the general opinion here, is that the charge is not justified, although two very well-informed ambassadors, with whom I have discussed the matter, have stated it to be their belief that there was probably some truth in the allegations.

Chronology of the Tragedy

IN THE COURSE of the Radek trial the names of General Putna and Marshal Tukhatchevsky were mentioned. Great care at the time was taken by Vyshinsky, the prosecutor, to absolve Tukhatchevsky from possible criminal complicity. Nevertheless, immediately following this trial, Tukhatchevsky disappeared. Rumors were rife that he was imprisoned, et ceteras. During this period, also, there was a great deal of talk that a bitter internecine struggle was going on between the army and the secret police.

In the latter part of March Tukhatchevsky returned to Moscow. Along with Voroshilov, Tukhatchevsky came to the embassy in April for a dinner which I gave for officers of the Red army. There were no particular indications of stress as between these men at that time. Tukhatchevsky had the reputation of being a very able man. The French Ambassador, M. Coulondre, said that he understood that Tukhatchevsky's downfall could be traced partly to his indiscretions with a lady friend (alleged to be a German spy).

In April it was announced that Tukhatchevsky would be one of the official representatives to the coronation of King George.

ON THE 11TH of May it was officially announced that he was deposed from his command as assistant commissar for defense and assigned to a minor command in the Volga district.

On the 17th of May the central executive committee of the Communist Party decreed Soviet control over the army. Each military district thereafter was to be commanded by one military officer and two other members. This meant absolute "party control" of the army and political dominance over military discipline and action.

On the 11th of June Tukhatchevsky and the other defendants were arrested, charged with treason and with plotting with a "foreign state" (Germany). It was announced that they had admitted their guilt. On the following day they were alleged to have been tried, adjudged guilty.

The Army and the Party

IT IS, of course, the fact that the source of greatest weakness, as well as the source of greatest strength to this government, is the Red army. It is the only factor in the equation which could immediately overthrow and destroy the government. Military observers here are practically unanimous in the belief that in point of man power and officer personnel it is a splendid organization. The most intensive tests—physical, nervous and mental—are applied in the training and selection of its officers. It is fair to assume that, under these conditions, an officer class, conscious of its own superiority, has developed in the army.

While the discipline of the army and its technical equipment are first-class, no one knows better than these officers that this means that the Red army is only "all dressed up with no place to go" unless industrial conditions back of the line will support it. It has been reported that there has been much discontent, and a large amount of criticism, voiced by the army against the alleged inefficiency of political heads of industry and their failure to live up to commitments in deliveries.

If, therefore, in the face of other critical situations, the men in the government here were confronted with the possibility of a lack of allegiance in the army itself, it is small wonder that such speed and ruthlessness were employed in establishing once and for all that the army was the creature of the political bureaucracy and not its master. To charge that army generals were a party to the possibility of invasion by Germany was to mobilize the nation to the support of the government.

FROM THE facts which we have, certain deductions can be reached as to what the situation probably was. It would have been quite natural for strong-minded men, such as these men were, to have criticized political bureaucratic control of industry when it handicapped the army. It is also reasonable to assume that a group of men, such as these, would resent vigorously the imposition of an espionage system over them, through the instrumentality of a secret police system, under the control of politicians.

It would also be quite natural for men of this character, and particularly this training, to have resented bitterly the possible destruction of the fine military organization which they had built up, by the imposition of political control over the military command in each military district. It is quite fair to assume that these men would not permit the party, of which they were members, to adopt this course of conduct as a matter of "party principle," without vigorous opposition. It is possible that they continued to voice such opposition.

However, if after the 17th of May, when political control over the army was established as a result of a party decision, the opposition on the part of these officers continued, their action would be treasonable and a felony under Bolshevik rules of behavior. It is a fundamental of party government that once a party action is established by a vote of the majority, any further opposition thereto constitutes treason.

Party Establishes Supremacy

UNDER ALL of the conditions it can also be quite reasonably considered that the party leaders responsible for the conviction of these defendants had convinced themselves that these Red army generals had outgrown their creators and were a serious threat to the party organization and dominance. It is possible also that these party leaders found but little difficulty in spelling out of the conduct of the defendants an overt conspiracy to impose the will of the army over the party, and failing therein to engage in a conspiracy with a foreign enemy to overthrow the state.

It is not generally believed that the morale of the army has been basically affected. It is still, in the main, a communistic and party "citizen soldiery." "The party" has been insistently drilled into the youth of the army as a religion. It is probably too deeply rooted in the rank and file to have been easily destroyed. So far as the officers are concerned, they doubtless recognize realistic conditions. It has been very clearly and ruthlessly established that the party is "boss."

VOROSHILOV, the chief of the army, is an old Bolshevik. He is generally regarded as a strong and vigorous type of man whose loyalty and convictions would not be swayed by personal ambition. He seems thoroughly loyal to Stalin.

The effect of these shootings have probably been more serious in their adverse effect on conditions in Europe, outside of Russia, than on conditions within the Soviet Union. There is no doubt that the confidence of France and England in the stability of a potential eastern European ally must have been severely shaken by these events.

Barring assassination, or a foreign war, the position of this government and the present regime looks impregnable for the present, and probably for some time to come. The danger of the Corsican for the present has been wiped out.

Patriotic Spying

THE LAW forbidding employers and others to spy on those political organizations known as labor unions, which have private taxing powers and their own private laws and courts, is a dangerous law and should be repealed.

There is no reason why these political groups, with their great powers and their over-all record of ruthless criminality and oppression, should be given the protection of a Federal law which attempts to preserve the dark secrecy that all conspirators and thieves prefer.

No other element in our Nation enjoys such protection. Although there is no other element whose evil record so urgently demands that its conduct be carefully watched at all times in the public interest including, most imperatively, the interest of the workers.

I HAVE NOT heard whether Senator Robert M. La Follette intends to proceed against me for investigating union affairs, often with the assistance of men within the unions, but if he should call me before his left-wing Dies Committee of the Senate, I would cheerfully say that I have had thousands of communications from union members revealing otherwise hidden facts of misconduct within the ruling group of unions.

I would tell him that much information obtained in this manner has been found useful by prosecutors, both Federal and State, in punishing crooks who could not have been exposed except by victims on the inside. I would tell him that some of his colleagues in both houses of the national legislature have asked permission to examine the data in my files and have used this material for guidance in conducting investigations. It seems unlikely that Senator La Follette would try to punish these public prosecutors and these Congressional colleagues of his for receiving this information obtained by means of which might be challenged as a violation of the sanctity of union affairs.

And have I been guilty of spying in passing on information to these public officials and even to employers so that the employers might protect their legitimate interests and the workers in their employ? Because, if so, let La Follette call the wagon, for I have done just that and intend to continue to do so.

I exchange information with employers and lawyers engaged in fighting off predatory unioneers. I receive much information from workers who, in turn, sometimes call on me for data on union manhunters who are trying to unionize them against their will. A group of workers in a Southern city called on me some time ago, and I gave them information on Mike Quill, the Irish party liner of the Transport Workers Union of the C. I. O. which, I hope, had some effect in their decision to keep out of the clutches of this consistent follower of the Moscow line.

I have before me at this moment a copy of the Office and Professional News, the publication of the Office Clerks Union of the C. I. O. This and the C. I. O. communications union, composed of wire and wireless telegraph operators and teletype operators, are two of the most dangerous organizations in the country, from the standpoint of espionage. Between them they have access to correspondence, books and business secrets of the companies which employ their members and to a great proportion of all the confidential wire and wireless messages, not only of companies and individuals, but of the Government as well.

WELL, the Office and Professional News will give you an idea how red is the Office Workers Union. This paper carries an advertisement for the Communist Party's official organ and a display story shouting up the demand of the party-line New York Newspaper Guild, that my copy be excluded from the Stars and Stripes, a publication of the various American expeditionary forces, on political grounds. It also contains a ballyhoo story for a recent Communist Party line movie called "Native Land," in which the narration is done by Paul Robeson, the Negro singer who has spent much time in Russia and is identified with many Communist Front organizations. It contains a cheer for the release of Earl Browder, the chief of the Communist, anti-American conspiracy, and a proposal that each member of the union be assessed one hour's pay per month for Russian war relief and for no other relief.

Does Senator La Follette or anyone else believe that such an organization would forbear to engage in espionage against the employers of office workers, having access to the employers' confidential affairs? And is the employer guilty of a wrong if he, in turn, spies on this Communist front which has planted spies in his place?

There is no longer any doubt that the political party for which this union shows such a strong devotion is an anti-American conspiracy. That question was settled by Attorney General Francis Biddle in an opinion, prompted by we know not what devious political motives, in the Harry Bridges case when he said the party "advises and advocates the overthrow by force and violence of the Government of the United States." So I say that Americans who can do so should spy on such an organization and that such spying, for from deserving punishment, is a patriotic service.

If you back off and take an objective look you must realize that the only reason why spying on unions is forbidden is a political reason, for Mr. Biddle, in another announcement a short while before his Bridges opinion, acknowledged that the unions, with their vast treasuries and taxing powers, are political agencies of the party in power.

Today And Tomorrow

War Information

THERE HAVE been, it seems to me, two main sources of trouble in the Government's dealing with war information.

LIPPMANN

One of them might be called the aftermath of Pearl Harbor; for the first few months there was nothing but bad news of serious reverses and, put to this very hard test, the Government flinched and then handled the bad news badly. This has caused a general sense of anxiety and uncertainty.

The other source of trouble has been in the field covered by the temporary war agencies, and more specifically in the President's curious failure to set them up efficiently. This has caused the confusion about rationing and similar measures which depend upon popular understanding.

MR. ELMER DAVIS is taking charge at a time when the real situation in the Pacific has become much more favorable as a result of the campaign in Coral Sea and of the Battle of Midway. But the effects of the earlier period remain in that the credit of our official war news has been impaired. It will be Mr. Davis's first task to restore its credit.

This is not a matter of publishing information not now known about what happened at Pearl Harbor and about what happened the same day to the American Air Force in the Philippines. For the essential information about these disasters is known. It is no longer a secret to the enemy or to a host of Americans. The problem now is how to square the official accounts in such a way that henceforth official accounts will be read with confidence.

THIS CAN be said, and I think must be said without taking too critical a view of what the service departments did under the shock of the dangerous and humiliating surprise in the first phase of the war. The full extent of damage done at Pearl Harbor could not be disclosed until the damage had been repaired, and the defenses of that critical position made secure. The initial disaster in the Philippines could not be talked about while the American and Filipino armies were making their tremendous stand on Bataan and at Corregidor.

It would have been better, no doubt, if no attempt had been made to discount the sombre reality of that opening phase of the war by magnifying and ballyhooing small tactical success. But in the main what is wanting now is the kind of confession which is good for the soul: a candid disclosure of the defeats we suffered, of the perils we faced and have now surmounted.

WHATEVER Mr. Davis decides to do about the past, which he inherits, one thing we may count upon. Unlike those who have carried the burden of the first dark months, Mr. Davis will be leading from strength rather than from weakness. Though we may suffer reverses, the position should never again be so dangerously exposed as it was in December and January. Therefore, circumstances should not impose upon him an almost impossibly hard choice between truth and dire necessity.

BUT MR. DAVIS will almost certainly have a difficult task when he comes to making intelligible the Government's information on internal affairs. The root of the trouble here is that the President has not recognized the necessity of giving Mr. Nelson, Mr. Henderson, and now Mr. Davis, the authority and the standing which men with their responsibilities ought to have.

The fact that their authority rests on vague executive orders and on personal contact with the President is exceedingly awkward and a constant source of embarrassment. The constitutional ground under their feet is not firm when they are dealing with the regular departments, when they are dealing with Congress, when they are dealing with the public. They have to administer their jobs not by well-defined authority but by influence, and it is here that the conflicting statments about rubber, gasoline, and the rest are generated. How could Mr. MacLeish, how now can Mr. Davis,—neither of them with Cabinet rank, neither of them confirmed by the Senate, both of them personal Presidential appointees—edit and veto the speeches and public pronouncements of, let us say, Mr. Ickes and Mr. Jones and Mr. Henderson? Have we not just seen that it needed the President himself to silence the babel of voices on the subject of rubber and gasoline?

IF WE LOOK still more closely at the position of the emergency offices, we shall find, I believe, that the fundamental defect is that the President has placed at their head technicians and experts rather than public men, statesmen and politicians. Now indispensable as are technicians and experts, they cannot successfully conduct government. The technicians and the experts need to be led and they needed to be protected by public men.

Take, for example, the Army and the relation between General Marshall, the military technician, and Secretary Stimson, the public man. Suppose General Marshall were at the head of the War Department; it would be General Marshall who would have to conduct the relations of the Army with Congress, with the general public, with the other departments of Government. General Marshall would have very little time and energy left to organize and command the Army, and he would be wracked by a thousand disputes and pressures that now are absorbed by Secretary Stimson and the civilian staff of the War Department.

NOW MR. NELSON is a technician: he has no political experience. Mr. Henderson is a technician: he has never held a political office, elective or appointive. Mr. Davis is, in the sense I am using the word, a technician: a very distinguished, absolutely reliable professional journalist: but he has never been in public life. I submit that these men ought to have the same kind of political guidance and political protection as Secretary Stimson gives to General Marshall and as Secretary Hull gives to the State Department. For only now and then can the President find time and energy to guide and protect his political orphans. They have to be in political hot water before they are taken care of at the White House.

What is the use of pretending that it is not necessary to understand politics in order to conduct a government? Yet because the President does not like to alter his Cabinet, he has set up outside the Cabinet, exposed naked to all the political weather, men like Nelson, Henderson, MacLeish, and Davis. These men are not politicians but they have to do the work of politicians. They must do it moreover without the insignia of office, without the prestige of rank, as personal agents of the President. Is it astonishing that they attract to themselves all the rancors of politics, and must face them without the armor or the training of a politician?

WE SHALL, I suppose, muddle through. But if we do, it will be because the press, understanding the plight of the orphaned experts, takes them under its protection and sees them through their ordeal.

Great Statecraft

By Anthony Balasy

Anglo-Russian Pact

IT IS a fair guess that when the diplomatic history of the present war will be written the American people will have every reason to be proud of the men who are responsible for the conduct of their country's foreign policy. The United States and democratically minded people everywhere will take pride not only in the political astuteness and sagacity of these men but also in their sincere devotion to democratic principles as displayed during the difficult months that preceded the signing of the Anglo-Russian agreement of May 26, 1942.

The agreement refers primarily to Europe and Article III may mark the beginning of a new era of continental collective security, the incubation period of which will begin with the cessation of hostilities and end with the adoption of proposals by the two contracting parties and "other like-minded States" for common action to preserve peace and resist aggression in the post-war period.

IT IS an open secret that the momentous accord reached between the Soviet and the British Governments was greatly influenced by the views of the American administration; it contains no advance commitments and, in Mr. Eden's words, no secret engagements of any kind. It is as good as the Atlantic Charter and the hand of the United States is not far to seek.

This latest development and the obvious part played in it by the United States brings up visions of a sadly bungled past, memories of puny bickerings and missed opportunities. Within the last 20 years collective security was fiercely fought, for and against, both in Geneva and in the various European capitals. It came to naught, not because of inherent deficiencies of its underlying principles, but because of the spirit of the League and its leading protagonists, who never learned to think in terms of understanding and neighborly collaboration. They talked of peace and collective security, but what they meant was the petrification of a system which could have worked out to the satisfaction of all if only the doors of reasonable readjustments had not been wholly barred.

What was lacking in the councils of Europe was the effective influence of a Power, materially strong enough to give weight to its will and enjoying sufficient moral force to command universal respect; the League needed the presence of a State which was alive to the realization that what mankind was longing for was the application and not just the implications of democracy.

TODAY these considerations are part and parcel of mankind's collective thought; how deeply this is realized by the people of the United States itself is not for me to say. But there can be no doubt that whatever the people or their elected representatives may feel, when the time comes to consider the shape of our post-war world the globe will have shrunk to such an extent that we will all sit considerably closer together under a common roof of plane-pervaded skies.

But let us go back to the agreement which, as we said, refers primarily to Europe. As a European I hail it with unstinted enthusiasm. Not only as a war measure likely to hasten the defeat of Hitler, but perhaps even more so as a piece of constructive work, a cornerstone, maybe, in an edifice of lasting peace and international decency. It should be kept in mind that ever since its inception the Soviet foreign policy has been eminently peaceful, and for obvious reasons: the gigantic social experiment, as it not under way, needed security from aggression to carry out its task. When the war is over the experiment will have to go on, and therefore it is as much in the interest of the Soviets as in that of all other European nations, that the universal menace of Nazi gangsterism should be done away with once for all.

The agreement, however, contains another very important stipulation. Article V says that the contracting parties will act in accordance with the principle of not seeking territorial aggrandizement for themselves . . . . The Hungarian Government, that tool of Hitler, in Mr. Rooosevelt's words, tries to make the Hungarian people believe that by fighting side by side with the Nazis against the Red Army they are defending their native land, but the words of the agreement, as quoted above, gives this assertion the lie it deserves.

The Anglo-Russian agreement is really good news. The reference in its preamble to the Atlantic Charter lifts it to a plane where the United States also stand, that America which in the hearts of millions in the Old World stands as a pledge of redemption from tyranny and also of a better future in which Mr. Wallace's "common man" will have his freedom and his security.

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

Rubber, Steel and Subways

THE SHORTAGES of steel and rubber are grave national problems, but in one respect they may prove to be a blessing in disguise to Washington. They will doubtless prevent Congress from hastily ordering the construction of subways for the relief of District commuters. For the scarcity of rubber and gasoline has reduced the number of cars on the streets, and wartime demands for steel and other strategic materials has made it impractical to build subways in any event.

PUSEY

To be sure, the question of building subways to relieve the city's wartime congestion has not been disposed of officially. The survey which Congress ordered the District Commissioners to make has been completed and their report is expected to be sent to Capitol Hill this week. But whatever the recommendations of the local authorities may be, there seems to be no likelihood that our streets will be torn up in wartime for any extended underground traffic ways. This apparently means that the city will have an opportunity to review the whole problem in times that are more nearly normal.

Even if there were no shortage of strategic materials and man power, it would be extremely unwise, of course, to plan a subway system to serve present-day Washington. No one knows how many of the Government employes brought here because of the war will remain in the city. Possibly Washington will continue to grow as it did after the first World War. But even if we make that assumption, allowance must be made for a vast shift of population and of employment centers after the war. At the moment Federal employes are concentrated in a few small areas, with many thousands of them located in temporary buildings. To construct a subway to meet this temporary problem might prove to be a gigantic waste of funds.

ONE of the most congested areas at present, for example, is Constitution Avenue in the vicinity of the War and Navy Buildings. If more and more Federal employes were to be crowded into this tight spot, some sort of underground traffic would be unavoidable. But all plans for future development of the city call for demolition of these structures as well as the more temporary quarters close by, which have been built since the war began. New structures are to be erected north of Constitution Avenue, but the net effect will be notably to reduce congestion in this area.

Obviously, a transportation system must be planned to serve the long-time interests of a city. Too many of those who are clamoring for subways take it for granted that Washington will continue to expand vertically, as New York, Chicago, Detroit and many other cities have done. Actually, however, the carefully laid plans of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission call for less congestion in the central part of the city. Its chief aim is to divert future growth in the governmental plant from downtown Washington to sections that are more accessible to surface traffic.

If plans of the N. C. P. P. C. are followed, the next great area for development by the Government will be East Capitol Street. The location of some large departments east of the Capitol would intensify the development of residential property in the Southeast and Northeast, thus enabling many employes to go to and from their offices without entering the downtown bottleneck. In other words, the plan for the Capital is specifically designed to avoid the baffling problems of overcrowding that plague the typical large American city.

THE really momentous decision that must be made is whether or not this plan is to be followed. If it is followed, then we may expect a gradual lessening of congestion in the centers where it is now most acute. In that event, the city will not need subways of the New York type. Indeed, it would be utterly impossible for a decentralized city to support underground traffic tubes that might cost as much as five million dollars a mile. Only an extremely dense population can support a transit system of that sort.

We should unflinchingly face the fact, however, that if decentralized planning is permanently thrown overboard, as it has been temporarily in the present emergency, subways will be inevitable. And it would not be simply a question of resorting to underground trains to relieve present congestion. Much greater congestion would have to be permitted—Washington would have to be transformed into a skyscraper city—to justify the enormous expense of subways.

The steel and rubber shortages will give us another chance to work out the problem without abandoning the idea of a decentralized city. Already constructive forces are at work. Within a few months all future apartment houses and hotels will have to provide parking space for at least part of their tenants and patrons. Funds are about to be appropriated to put the new "fringe" parking lot system into operation. In both instances the effect will be to take cars off the streets and to use for parking purposes land that otherwise might be overcrowded with buildings.

These are hopeful developments. If they are supplemented by genuine decentralization of Government office buildings erected after the war, the subways issue can be safely laid on the shelf. Of course, there must be continuous development of underground traffic tubes and depressed highways at points of acute congestion. Such localized underpasses have already proved their worth at Scott and Thomas Circles. Others have already been planned or are under construction. A depressed highway running eastward from Ninth Street on K has been tentatively planned as well as an elevated highway connected with Key Bridge in Georgetown.

No doubt other improvements of this sort will be requested by the Commissioners' report. If they are wisely planned and if a rigid policy of decentralization is carried out, Washington may escape for many years, if not permanently, the disagreeable experience of burrowing underground to get into and out of the downtown area.

posting of rubber scraps and said "it will stay there as long as it's needed."

The duration of the drive, asked by the President, was prescribed specifically yesterday by the War Production Board, with provisions to be "superimposed on the D. C. Salvage Committee rubber program" for the duration of the President's drive only. The dates were fixed as June 15 to June 30. Gasoline dealers and service stations will have to provide scales for weighing the purchased materials and the authorized stations were listed as gasoline service stations, Fire Department houses, police precinct stations, shoe repair shops and garages of the Automotive Trade Association. Regulations permit any citizen or business having "a warrantable" amount of salvage rubber to sell the material direct to a dealer if desired.

Here is where the rubber goes: From the receiving depots, such as the service stations and shoe shops, the material will be resold to the Wholesale Gasoline Dealers, who will reimburse the service station at the same price, collect the material and store it pending a final sale to the Government. All profits from the handling will benefit designated charities, such as the Army and Navy Relief Funds and the Red Cross.

The public responded here. Nationally, a wire service spoke of "glowing reports of widespread response."

Hallett Hill, director of the Mount Pleasant School for Secretaries, Fourteenth Street and Park Road, lifted a 100-pound welcoming mat from the front door, sent it by three students to a filling station at Fourteenth and Kenyon Streets Northwest with instructions that the Red Cross have the proceeds.

District officials, headed by Comafter a meeting yesterday that durmissioner J. Russell Young, said ing the salvage campaign garbarge collection trucks will not haul any refuse with rubber in it nor will the incinerator receive rubbish containing rubber. It was reemphasized that householders should not contribute articles which they would have to replace. There is no quota of tons or pounds of scrap rubber to be met. The quota, simply, is the most that can be obtained.

Preliminary returns from the Nation-wide drive indicate it will be "an outstanding success," Chairman William R. Boyd of the Petroleum Industry War Council said in one of a number of radio addresses made by Federal and industry officials to spur the collection.

Late reports showed the drive was off at a "flying start," he said. Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes, likewise optimistic, expressed the "hope" that the campaign would produce enough scrap rubber to make possible retreading and recapping of automobile tires for ordinary civilian purposes, but warned:

"That is only a hope. Neither I nor anyone else, right now, can make any promise. After all, the armed forces must come first, and the Army and Navy have already been called upon to cut their rubber by 25 per cent."

Price Administrator Leon Henderson made a special plea for motorists to turn in unserviceable tires, and Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard appealed to farmers to cooperate to the fullest extent. Wickard said a large part of the used rubber stockpile was located on the farms.

Congress members levelled off again at the rubber situation yesterday. Senator Thomas (Republican) of Idaho, charged that it has been "badly bungled." In June, 1939, he said, Congress authorized executive agencies to accumulate stocks of rubber and other vital materials. In 1940 there was similar legislation.

"The executive agencies, including those which had been created by executive order without statutory guidance or definite responsibility, failed to wake up to the dangers," Thomas asserted. He urged support of the scrap rubber campaign. Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana, said "there are too many cooks."

Senator Harry Truman (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of the special committee investigating war production, emphasized the importance of the rubber collection with a declaration that the junk heaps of America hide "a greater wealth of vital rubber than our enemies could assemble from all sources available to them today." He sharply criticized the "dilatory actions" of Government agencies and "the silfish convincing of large industries in developing the Nation's synthetic rubber program before Pearl Harbor.

The drive went on, toward an outcome that may decide the question of Nation-wide gasoline rationing as one means of saving rubber. The collections in New York City included bloomer elastics and an 11-pound rubber tube used in a mechanical player piano. A building supply company in Watertown, Mass., dumped 6 tons of old tires at a filling station. Nick Mourat, 16, who chases fouls behind a baseball park in Hollidays Cove, Pa., and knew the inns and outs of a shoe repair shop nearby, gathered 100 pounds of rubber heels for the drive.

James E. Colliflower, chairman of the District Salvage Committee, said last night that he was "heartened" by the response here yesterday—as it met the eye in advance of the formal reports. He urged those wishing to donate their material to take it to police and fire stations where the weighing process would be unnecessary inasmuch as no purchases are made at such places and the weight can be just estimated for the record.

Meanwhile, Deputy Petroleum Coordinator Ralph K. Davies announced a comprehensive survey to determine the oil industry's ability to produce raw materials for synthetic rubber manufacture with existing refining equipment.

Although a 400 million dollar construction program for synthetic rubber plants is already underway, lack of essential materials makes it impossible to expand the program at present and steps must be taken to make full use of existing facilities, Davies said.

Fala Does His Bit; Gives Up Rubber Bone

President Roosevelt's pet dog, Fala, was one of the first contributors to the Nation-wide scrap rubber collection campaigns ordered to begin yesterday throughout the country by his master.

White House attaches said he would part with a number of rubber toys which admirers have given him and which he has enjoyed chewing and chasing. Even these in good condition, however, will now go into the national stockpile

U. S. Marine Marksmen

The advanced school in gunnery and marksmanship at Quantico, Va., turns out the crackshot United States Marines now on the world battle fronts. To train the sea-soldier on foot against an attack from the air, the expert rifle instructors at Quantico have rigged up a moving target to simulate a strafing plane. It travels 20 feet a second on an angle similar to a plane diving to attack ground forces. Three marine gunners blast away at the gadget at left. Girls in Army Emphasize Slender Hips

By Ida Jean Kain

WHAT do you think Uncle Sam's first move was when Congress got around to deciding in favor of a feminine Army? Why, he promptly put a ceiling on avoirdupois!

Ida Jean Kain

If you tip the beam at higher than the standard weight chart allowance for your height—and age—you can't get into this new Women's Auxiliary Army Corps.

But Uncle Sam is pretty broad-minded. As you get into the 21 plus stages you are allowed to weigh more.

At the age of 21 you are supposed to weigh around 105 pounds for a height of 5 feet: From 21 to 25 you can weigh 114 pounds for the same height; from 26 to 30, you can go on up to 117 pounds; from 31 to 35, you are allowed to reach 120 pounds, from 36 to 40, a weight of 123 pounds; and from 41 to 45 you can hit 123 to 126 pounds top. The scale goes up to a maximum of about 171 pounds for a woman six feet tall.

Best Soldiers

But regardless of age, the best soldiers will be the ones who hold their normal weight. Whatever you are entitled to weigh at 30 is your best weight from then on.

You can see that weight has nothing to do with age. Your bones do not weigh more as you grow older. Neither do your organs. Any increase in weight is simply in fatty tissue and so much extra burden.

Your normal weight really depends on your structure. With a stocky frame you can weigh more than with a slight frame. Therefore, a woman of 5 feet 5 inches can weigh up to 135 pounds and be normal weight. With a large frame she could weigh as much as 148 pounds for normal. The variation in structure changes the weight figure.

Start your figuring on the basis of a height of 5 feet and give yourself 100 pounds, 105 pounds, 110 pounds and 120 pounds for a slight, medium, stocky or a very large frame. Then, if you have an exceptionally large frame, you can get away with a bit extra.

For each inch over 5 feet you are entitled to five extra pounds of weight. And that is all there is to this weight business. Your structure is the deciding factor.

It's nice to know that the WAAC's will be kept in good shape with girdles. When we get around to rationing these garments, they will be given the preference. That is as it should be!

You may not be able to volunteer, but you would do well to get into good condition. Check up on your weight. If you are overweight you are not as efficient as you should be. The women who are left behind are going to have to do more work and they can carry on betteir with weight at normal.

Oldtime Percale Goes Modern

The calicos and percales grandmother used to make into wrappers, and "Mother Hubbards" are now appearing in abbreviated play fashions, "casuals" and evening dresses. Designers have taken these fabrics out of the kitchen and made them into chic outfits which keep hue and shape after many tubbings. This will be evidenced at the show today at the Willard Hotel, with fashions from a local store. The outfit here shows percale in modern use in a two-piece apple print play suit. Camille Anderson, this year's Maid of Cotton, wears it in blue and red, with red rick-rack trim on the one-piece shorts set and separate overskirt. For information call National 4200, Extension 259

How to Wash Rayon Hosiery

It is the order of the day that hose should be washed after every wearing, and as soon as they are taken off. Rayon hose should be washed in the same way you would wash other fine hose. Following are points to remember.

Wash and rinse in lukewarm water—never hot water. Use a good suds made from mild chips or tissue thin flakes. Never rub soap into the hose. Squeeze the suds through the hose. Do not rub or twist. The washing may be gentle, for dirt does not easily penetrate the rayon fiber. Hang over a smooth rod to dry. Do not dry near the radiator or in the sun. NEVER iron rayon hose. Too warm water, harsh soap and sun drying may cause fading and decrease the wear life.

The stocking length should be bought according to the type of wearer—short, average or tall. The type of girdle, foundation garment or garter belt that is worn, also affects the hosiery length. If a brief girdle or garter belt is worn a longer stocking will be required, than if a foundation garment that reaches well down over the thigh is worn. The standard average length is 30 inches in both seamless and full fashioned hose, with a plus or minus tolerance of 1 inch in all sizes.

Both plain and mesh hose are available in rayon. There are many qualities of rayon just as there have been silk and rayon hose. If the first pair you buy is not entirely satisfactory, do not condemn all of them, but try others. You will soon learn the type, brand and style that give you satisfaction. Also become a label-reader and be guided by what the manufacturer recommends.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Thinks Despairingly of Taking Her Life, Because Her Husband, Whom She Idolizes, Defiantly Spends All His Leisure in Another Couple's Home

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young wife, 24 years old, and I have two small children. My problem is this: My husband comes home from work every evening, bathes, has dinner and then leaves for a neighbor's house to spend the evening. He returns late, either drunk or under the influence of drink. The neighbor's wife has told me she loves my husband and that, if it were not for my children, she would "take him away" from me. She has told my husband the same thing.

She said this two months ago, at which time I asked my husband not to go to her home again, unless her husband is there. He told me he would continue to go there as he pleased. He asked, "Why shouldn't I go there?" Not only does he spend every evening there, but all day on Sunday, even to having dinner and staying late into the night. He did not drink before he started visiting these people, but now the day doesn't go by that he isn't half or wholly intoxicated. His work is very dangerous; it requires a clear head. Any day I expect to hear that he has been hurt or killed because of carelessness on the job.

Yesterday I went to the neighbors' house and asked to talk to both husband and wife. Both said they couldn't help what my husband did. The woman told me that my husband had said if it were not for the children he would have left me long ago. When my husband came home that evening I asked him not to visit these people again. He refused. In desperation, I told him to choose between them and his wife, children and home. I told him, "Either stay away from them or I'll leave you." He said if I felt that way I could leave. He has told me many times that he would rather visit their house than stay home.

Please believe me when I tell you I am not a nagging wife. If he went there to visit several nights a week, or if he went out with her husband I would not object. But he devotes all his time to them and refuses to take me out at all. He says he doesn't see why I should expect to go out with him. In the past month I have lost 30 pounds. I am a nervous wreck. I can't keep food on my stomach. I have tried to keep calm and cool, but this situation has been going on for almost a year and I can't stand much more.

I am ready to take my life and have tried to get up enough courage several times. In fact, I know I am losing my mind. I love him more than myself, the children and God put together. Please try to help me.

DESPERATE READER.

91st Psalm Points

Only Road to Peace

DEAR D. R.: Your source of help is within yourself, and you can tap it in a steady flow the moment you realize the true nature of your problem—which is: how to adopt a sane, corrective attitude toward your husband's behavior in relation to these neighbors. As one of the great spiritual teachers of this age has said: "To solve any problem, get a little higher in consciousness." He also says: "When you resist a difficulty, you antagonize it, and it hits back. Do not wrestle with the error. Invoke peace of mind first, and all good things will follow on that."

While it is invariably injurious to health of mind, body and spirit to dwell on one's mistakes of the past, it is essential to your triumph over despair, in this instance, to briefly take stock of the incontrovertible evidence that the more you have worried about, and fought against, your husband's misguided conduct, the worse it has seemed to become, while you have grown sicker all the time. As has been said: The appetite grows for what it feeds on. This you have been proving by stepping up your poison-diet of bootless anxiety with each new day—proceeding from worry about the neighbors' supposed influence on your husband to worry lest he be killed at work, worry lest you lose your mind, dark thoughts of suicide, etc.

It is possible, indeed, that you have always been more or less pessimistic in your outlook on life, and that your unwittingly depressing trend of thought has made you a most dispiriting companion for your husband, so that the society of his recklessly, alcoholically gay neighbors appeals to him as "tonic," in contrast. His interest in them is less than a year old, and his heavy drinking is a recent development. Since you have two children, obviously you have been married several years. From this, one may logically infer that during the first years of marriage he was a sober, dependable partner. For some reason, however, he has come to feel acutely uncomfortable at home, so that he wastes all his leisure time in a neighbor's house, in search of diversion and alcoholic forgetfulness of his married status.

That he would embark on so childish an "out" from his unhappiness and defiantly pursue it shows, of course, the unfortunate extent of his habitual failure to bring wisdom and self-discipline to bear in solving his problems. Yet the story of your frantic demoralization at feeling deprived of his companionship gives the clue to the reason why he gropes elsewhere for refreshment of mind and invigoration of spirit. Neither of you has discovered for himself that all emotions, of good or bad import—whether making for contentment or despair, for success or defeat, for magnetism or repulsion—have their origin within the individual mind or soul or consciousness.

Lacking knowledge of this immutable law—which establishes (without exception) positive, constructive, optimistic and kindly attitudes of mind as the primary, indispensable condition for making all one's experiences harmonious—lacking such knowledge, you and he naturally have been failing to practice that salvationary precept. And the resultant sense of confused frustration and lack of purpose felt in the soul of each has (1) prompted you to look wanly to him as a possible source of psychic support and uplift in life, and (2) has goaded him to look further afield for the same vital sustenance, since it has not been forthcoming through you.

Whatever noble qualities you would convey to him, you must first have exemplified in your own personality and performance. As you hope to win your husband to godliness, you must first have discovered God, and must know of him, in the words of the ninety-first Psalm: "He is my refuge and my fortress; in Him will I trust." You are cut off from help and hope; defenseless indeed against "the terror by night" and "the destruction that wasteth at noonday," so long as you worship, with bleak idolatry, your equally "lost child" husband, and hold him more dear with all his sinful imperfection, than your life, the children and God "put together." That statement of yours is fool's talk. (A fool, in the Biblical sense, is a person who fails to make use of the intelligence God has given him.)

Now, you may ask: But how does the soul contact God? How can I reverse the destructive trend of events, set in motion by negative attitudes? Where do I commence, in establishing an oasis of peace in my heart? And in bringing harmony into my affairs? Simple, direct, spirit-quickening answers to such questions are given in a book by Emmet Fox, entitled, "Power Through Constructive Thinking"—a companion-piece to his textbook on applied Christianity called, "The Sermon on the Mount." His revolutionary teaching will open for you the way to spiritual growth, and as you claim spiritual strength and insight, your destructive idolatry of your husband will be replaced by a detached and cherishing tenderness, easily able to bear with his faults. Emotions of fear, condemnation and resentment will no longer torment you, regardless of what he does. You will be unassailably happy in "the peace that passeth understanding."

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Short Haircut

Deanna Durbin is the newest star to fall for the short hair-cut. But Deanna was cautious. She cut it just short enough, so it looks like the shortest of the new bobs—when it is curled tight. But when it's combed out it is just long enough to be turned smoothly over a switch, to make the formal roll or pompadour so smart with evening gowns. Canny Deanna!

Future Holds Many Changes, So Get Ready

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

REVOLUTIONARY changes tumbling over our world these days make all of us wonder what life is going to be like when the present emergency is past. One thing sure—we aren't headed back to the so-called good old days. We can't draw a picture of life tomorrow, but so many people are working on plans and blueprints for the future that we can tell you about certain details that may play their small role.

Dispensing with certain basic materials may well prove a blessing in disguise. American scientific men are concentrating their efforts on substitutes that bid fare to serve us better than nature's original materials. The need to develop furniture for simpler smaller homes has spurred the architects and furniture designers on to create new ideas for furniture that makes more sense than much we had during the past opulent years.

Furniture Inadequacies

Most of us have known vaguely that furniture was too heavy and immobile for the small homes of today. Now there's a shortage of many materials that made it heavy, and the defense housing issue has spotlighted the inadequacies of much of our furniture. Some of the ideas developed in this crisis are worth thinking about . . . if for no other reason than to give us all time to get used to the new prospects.

A really revolutionary new furniture structure (designed by Clifford Pascoe and Ewald Holtkamp) is called the ladder-drawer construction, because the drawers fit into a ladder-type skeleton which eliminates the material wasted in inclosing sliding drawers in a case with extra sides and back. The advantage of this construction, besides conservation of materials and labor, is in the fact that the chest of drawers then doesn't have a back that has to be concealed . . . so it can be set out in the room with any or all of its sides exposed. And it is light in weight so it can be moved easily. This construction has been applied to various pieces such as chests of drawers, writing desks and dressing tables.

Solid Leg Construction

A new solid-leg construction has also been developed for tables, chairs, chests and the like. This leg is demountable and practically unbreakable and makes use of a new method of lock attachment. Bent laminated wood construction for sofas provides comfort with far less bulk than the traditional upholstered piece. A slung type of easy chair, really a formal version of the beach chair, promises good sitting with little bulk, as do modern versions of the Morris chair and the revival of the rocker in modern form. The need is not only for a less expensive easy chair but for one which uses no war-scarce materials such as metal for springs, jute for webbing, feathers or hair for filling, wool or silk for covering.

Almond Bar Strips Please Service Men

A recipe that produces cookies that ring the bell with the boys in service is usually one that is laden with chocolate and nuts. Should you be on the committee to bake cookies for U. S. O. parties, or want to mail your service man a box of cookies, you will find the following chocolate almond bar recipe a real flavor treat with the boys and a time-saver for yourself.

Almond Bar Cooky Strips—First make a batter and then the topping by following recipes:

Batter—Chop two 1¼-ounce almond chocolate bars very fine. Beat 3 eggs. Add ½ cup melted butter, ½ cup honey and 1-3 cup granulated sugar and beat. Add 2 cups sifted, all-purpose flour, sifted with ½ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon cinnamon and beat. Add almond bars and stir to blend. Pour into a greased, flour-dusted pan (about 16 by 8¼ by 1½ inches or 2 pans to equal). Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, about 20 minutes. Remove from oven and spread top with blended topping made from ½ cup granulated sugar and 2 tablespoons cream. Place under broiler until top is "blistered" and slightly brown. Watch carefully. Cut into thin strips while warm. Makes approximately 50 strips, 2½ inches long and ¾ inch wide.

Brilliant Reception Climaxes Washington Schedule for King George of Greece; Official Dinner Precedes Late Evening Fete; Crowded Gotham Calendar for Monarch

A FEW CONTINENTAL curtseys and several hundred grade-A American handshakes . . . A moving mass of hand-picked Washington notables, greeting the first reigning monarch to visit this country since the beginning of the war . . . U. S. officials who had already met the King, and scores of social celebrities who had never laid eyes on him before . . . Greek hospitality at its best, and a glittering assembly, turning out to what at least one guest termed "the most purposeful party of the season."

That, in a few noteshells, gives you an idea of the reception last night at the Greek Legation, where the Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos, "by command of His Majesty King George II of Greece" entertained almost 600 guests.

A fitting climax for the King's visit to Washington, the event offered both officialdom and a representative number of social celebrities a chance to meet the first reigning monarch to come to this country since the war began. Here by his own admission on his country's business, His Majesty has been entertained at a continuous series of official dinners and luncheons. Last night's fete, also official in character, nevertheless included a sizable number of personalities outside official circles, as well as envoys, counselors and military and naval attaches from all the embassies and legations.

'Brilliant' Is the Word for It

The Greeks probably have another word for it . . . but "brilliant" is the only American term that fittingly describes the type of party it was. Spring blossoms in pastel hues decorated the spacious rooms that were crowded to the walls with distinguished guests. Wives of diplomats and cave-dwelling dowagers turned out in the flossiest finery they have worn this year, and although invitations designated "black tie" attire for the men, trim service uniforms added a dash of sartorial smartness to the gathering.

For the most part, however, simplicity was the keynote of the reception itself; and the traditional folderol and fanfare usually noted at a party for a king were conspicuously missing.

"Such display as would be in order in peacetime cannot be observed now," said a legation spokesman.

Guests, whose crested invitations were for the reception, arrived at 10 o'clock. Two hours earlier, a company of 50 sat down to dine with His Majesty, and that part of the evening's entertainment was barely finished when the long and seemingly endless line of reception guests started up the stairway.

High-Ranking Officials at Dinner

Some of America's highest ranking officials attended the dinner. Vice President and Mrs. Henry Wallace and House Speaker Sam Rayburn headed the guest list, which also included the Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau; the Attorney General and Mrs. Francis Biddle, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox, and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins. The Army Chief of Staff Gen. George Marshall and Mrs. Marshall were there; also, Representative Sol Bloom, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Miss Vera Bloom and Senator Tom Connally, Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman, and Mrs. Connally; Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf Berle, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Wallace Murray, Mr. and Mrs. George Summerlin, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Alling.

Still others there were the former U. S. Ambassador to the Vatican and Mrs. Myron Taylor, Col. and Mrs. Louis Fortier, Capt. Andrew Hickey, H. C. Spruks, Mrs. William Donovan, Capt. and Mrs. J. L. McCrea, the Right Rev. Archbishop Athenagoras, Mr. and Mrs. Evang Sekeris and Mr. and Mrs. St. Theophanidis.

At the reception later, a steady stream of guests poured into the drawing room, where a double line did the greeting honors. Standing with His Majesty, who incidentally wore what a legation spokesman assured me was "an undress uniform," was the Greek Minister Cimon Diamantopoulos. Just back of them were the King's aides, and next in line, but still back of His Majesty, was Crown Princess Martha of Norway, whose white faille frock, splashed with a double border of large hand-painted roses, was worn with a short jacket. Also in line were Greek Counselor Philon A. Philon; the Greek Prime Minister, Emmanuel Tsouderos, and then Mme. Diamantopoulos, whose bouffant frock of dark green taffeta was styled with a train.

Guests moving down the line paused for brief greetings. Curtseys were of all degrees and designs. There was the deep flowing curtsey of the type made by Mme. Espil, Donna Julia Brambilla, and Miss Irene Boyle, and there was the dainty dip indulged in by Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Miss Carolyn Nash and a number of others. Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt came through with American style handshakes, and so did Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Representative and Mrs. Charles Dewey and most others from official circles.

Many Celebrities Seen in Throng

A long buffet table across one side of the dining room, and a champagne bar at the end had such a throng in front that I never got close enough to either to tell you a single thing about them. But, as well as I can remember, practically everybody in the usual party-going contingent was there, also with scores of officials whom I haven't seen at a party all season.

"Seems as if everybody in town is here," said Clarence Hewes, as he made his way through the crowded dining room.

Promptly at 10 o'clock, the crowd began to arrive. Ten minutes later, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Attorney General and Mrs. Biddle and Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles, all of whom had been dinner guests and were on their way home, could hardly make their way through the throng. At 11:30, when I left the reception, guests were still coming in. Even in this capital of democracy, nobody who gets a chance to shake hands with a king ever passes up the opportunity.

Mrs. Townsend's New Song to Be Heard Here Soon

And so Natalie Townsend has done it again!—written another stirring marching song. "The Spirit of Liberty." On July 15 Lily Pons will introduce the song at the gala concert at the Watergate when her husband, Andre Kostelanetz, will conduct the National Symphony Orchestra in a performance for the benefit of the Army and Navy relief. Mrs. Townsend hopes to be on hand for the performance an dwill no doubt remember another stirring evening—back in 1915—when her "Belgium Forever" was sung officially by another Metropolitan Opera star, Frances Alda.

For a number of years the vivid little French coloratura, Miss Pons, and Mrs. Lawrence Townsend have been close friends, so it is fitting that this artist should be the first to introduce the new song to the public.

As a matter of fact their friendship dates back a number of years and thereby hangs a tale. One hot evening in late May several years ago, Lawrence Townsend, former diplomat, was routed from his bed at considerable after midnight to the telephone. A reporter of a New York paper was on the wire and asked:

"Are you any relation to a Natalie Townsend who is in London, England?"

"Why—yes!" said the now wide-awake Mr. Townsend, adding in growing alarm—"Has anything happened to her?" "Oh, no!" reassured the reporter, "nothing serious. She just introduced the French prima donna, Lily Pons, to the King and Queen of England, at a concert in London this afternoon and we wanted to verify where she belonged. What relation is she of yours?"

"Oh!" Mr. Townsend gave a sigh of relief. "She's my wife!"

This new song, "The Spirit of Liberty," is dedicated to Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and all money realized from sale of copies will go to the fund for Army and Navy relief work. Yvonne Townsend, artistically gifted daughter of Mrs. Townsend, wrote the lyrics for the piece.

Patricia Hall Is Bride of Lieut. Putt

In a lovely garden wedding at her home on Occoquan Bay, Va., Miss Patricia Sherwood Hall became the bride of Lieut. Richard Evans Putt at 6 o'clock last evening. The bride is the daugther of Lieut. Col. W. Carvel Hall, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Hall. Lieutenant Putt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Basil F. Putt of Battle Creek, Mich.

The Rev. F. Bland Tucker officiated at the ceremony before an improvised altar set up in the garden of the Hall's historic home at Lorton in Fairfax County. Miss Minna Niemann rendered several piano solos throughout the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown ending in a sweeping train. It was fashioned with puffed sleeves and a sweetheart neckline. Her Brussels lace veil, a family heirloom, fell the length of the train and she carried a bouquet of lillies and baby's breath.

Miss Mary Clare Hall, sister of the bride, was her only attendant. She was gowned in a mousseline frock of blue and a dusty pink headdress. Her bouquet was of larkspur, snapdragons and roses.

Lieut. Edward ..rton of Staten Island served as best man. When the couple left for their wedding trip the bride wore a green and white suit with brown accessories. They will make their home in Parris Island, S. C. The bride was graduated from Gunston Hall and attended William and Mary College. Lieutenant Putt attended the University of Michigan where he was a member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity.

They Discuss Women's Chatter

U. S. Army Nurse Tells of Suffering, Privation on Bataan and Corregidor

COMPLACENT, apathetic Americans still are unaware of the heroic sacrifices their soldiers are making at the front. So declared Mary Lohr, United States Army nurse, who fought side by side with the armed forces in Bataan and Corregidor.

Miss Lohr arrived in Washington Sunday night from San Francisco and was an honored guest at the luncheon of the advisory council of the women's interests section of the War Department bureau of public relations held yesterday at the Hay-Adams House. Too ill to stand and speak before the guests, she nevertheless answered questions for reporters.

"At first everyone took 10 grains of quinine a day. Stock depleted, nurses and doctors stopped taking it and gave it only to the sickest patients," she said. "And even though 80 per cent of the soldiers were stricken with malaria fever, they kept on working, digging fox holes, and fighting."

"I'd nurse a fine boy, ill from malnutrition and fever one day," she related. "The next day he'd come back with his legs bombed off. Oh, those—filthy Japs! Unless you see, you don't know what war is . . . you can't realize how magnificently the boys worked in that traphole," she said, her voice breaking.

Medical supplies and food were inadequate from the beginning. She recalled the fact that around Easter there weren't enough glasses to hold communion. Finally one of the Navy dentists conceived the idea of making cups from bamboo. This was done and in the midst of falling bombs, soldiers, doctors, nurses and chaplains solemnly and reverently took communion from the bamboo cups.

"Bamboo—it's wonderful," she said. "It creaked soothingly at night around us in the jungles of Bataan. Then, we used it to piece out supplies in daylight."

Miss Lohr is a relative of Miss Lydia Kenner, who holds the relative rank of captain in the Nurses' Corps.

Speakers Warn Against Spreading Rumors

TWO SPEAKERS on the advisory council's luncheon program warned against repeating or spreading rumors. They were Mrs. James H. Doolittle, wife of Brigadier General Doolittle, and Col. Frederick George Sutton, member of the Australian Military Commission.

"Despite the signs posted around to avoid careless talk, Americans still are chatting and spreading rumors," explained Mrs. Doolittle. "I have just returned from a coast-to-coast trip and from swanky hotel to roadside joints Americans are doing too much chatting."

As for being the wife of an Army flier, Mrs. Doolittle said that the first thing she had to do was to stretch her sense of humor. "My husband could bring in more hungry aviators to feed," she said. "What's more, when we lived at Eagle Pass, Tex., we had the only hot shower available. So the bathroom was always filled with aviators taking showers. And linen was some problem."

She learned to be punctual. Her husband—then a young lieutenant—gave her 5 minutes in which to get dressed to go with him some place. The boys—the aviators who always were around—were more generous and allowed 10 minutes. If she couldn't make the deadline she was left at home. "Soon I learned to get ready in the specified time," explained Mrs. Doolittle. "It was no fun to be left behind."

Since General Doolittle always disliked dancing, he sent over substitute escorts on dance nights. Sometimes, she had 14 escorts at once, never less than two.

Too Many 'Chatter Bugs'

But back to chatter bugs. At least that's the name the Australians have given to rumormongers, according to Colonel Sutton. Emphasizing the necessity for squashing rumors and putting a stop to chatter, he told of his experience before coming to Washington.

About the time that the Australian ships sailed for Egypt, the rumor spread of the ship's departure. Next day it had grown to the number of ships and the exact time of leaving. The third day the names of the ships were being talked about. Soon people were saying that Berlin had broadcast where, when, number of troops on board and the names of the ships. Upon tracing the rumor only two people admitted to having heard the broadcast. One a "bloated alien," as the colonel termed him, confessed a cock-and-bull lie about hearing the broadcast.

"American women," said Colonel Sutton, "must stop chatting and repeating war rumors. Australian women had to be stopped. In most cases, the rumors are false but can do a great deal of harm."

Verkuyl Speaks

COL. JACOBUS A. VERKUYL of the Royal Netherlands East Indies army gave a survey background of the Dutch East Indies and told of the fight made at Java by the Dutch and British soldiers.

He recalled the fact that the large Netherlands merchant marines and submarines are continuing to fight the enemy. Men and women are fighting guerilla warfare throughout the Dutch East Indies.

"Although the Japanese have been preparing nearly a half century for the attacks," said Colonel Verkuyl, "and the Allies have just started, we'll win—no matter how long it takes."

Pointing out that this is a total war, he told how the women in the Dutch East Indies had fought as gallantly as the soldiers against great odds.

Alpha Xi Delta Presents $1500 To Red Cross

A unique feature of the $1500 collection was the 1-cent levy for each year of the birth of the members, who contributed in 60 colleges and universities and in many of the leading cities of the country where groups of alumnae live.

Alpha Xi Delta was founded 50 years ago and has 16,000 members. The national organization maintains a $30,000 house for the benefit of 25 college girls at 4715 Knox Road, College Park, Md.

The two members representing the Maryland chapter who presented the check on behalf of their sisters all over the country were Miss Helen Biesecker, Riverdale, Md., and Miss Barbara Wagner, also of Riverdale.

De Gaullist To Speak at Benefit Dinner

Under sponsorship of France Forever, Inc., official American organization representing the Free French movement under the leadership of Gen. Charles de Gaulle, Lieut. Col. Roger Brunschwig of General de Gaulle's staff will address a subscription dinner to be given by the association Thursday at 7:30 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel. Jean Delattre-Seguy, president of the Washington chapter, will preside.

Senator Claude Pepper of Florida will be one of the principal speakers of the evening. The military mission of the Comite National Francais (Free French Delegation) will attend the dinner.

Colonel Brunschwig, who since the last war has divided his time between France and the United States, rejoined the French army in 1938. His order to proceed to France and the fighting front having arrived after the collapse, he remained in the United States, placing his services at the disposal of General de Gaulle. He has done staff work for de Gaulle here and in London and is now back in this country on a four months' mission to speak to Frenchmen in America, explaining to them the purposes and activities of the Free French movement.

His World War I record is outstanding. A captain of the Chasseurs Alpins—the Blue Devils—he was wounded by machine gun bullets in 1916. He is a commander of the French Legion of Honor and holds both the French and Belgian Croix de Guerre, with palms and stars. Since the war he has served as vice president of Les Gueules Cassees, (Union of Facially Wounded French War Veterans).

Colonel Brunschwig, who will deliver his talk in English, has said that he will welcome questions from the floor, which he will answer in English.

The dinner is open to the public and reservations, at $3 a plate, may be made before June 17 at the office of France Forever, 1710 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, telephone Columbia 6488. Guests unable to attend the dinner are invited to hear the speakers after dinner.

Mrs. Bacon's Garden Scene Of Children's Fashion Show

Feminine ingenuity was spotlighted yesterday in the pleasantly green garden of Mrs. Robert Low Bacon's home when a dozen or so tiny tots modeled the clothes their mothers had made from cast-off material. The clothes, made by the women working in the British Relief Society, are to be sent to England to help the many British children "bombed out" of their belongings as well as the many youngsters who fall in the refugee class.

Wearing a kelly green snood, gold loop earrings and a white frock, Mrs. George Wythe explained the project to the interested listeners seated around the garden. Also making a speech (although she vowed it was "just a few words") was Mrs. Rex Benson, attractive wife of the Military Attache of the British Embassy. Mrs. Benson declared that three million children were in need of clothing in England and said that "thanks to us on this side of the ocean, the clothing problem was being solved."

"So this is F Street!" laughed Mrs. W. C. Naude, wife of the Attache of the South African Legation, as she surveyed the spacious garden with its overhanging trees and brick walks. "For me F Street always started in the business section. I never realized there were residences, so lovely, down here," she continued. Mrs. Naude had to dash away, however, to see that her young daughter, Gillian, was properly into her pajamas and warm robe with a peaked hood—one of the features of the fashion show.

Mrs. Raymond Lee, wife of General Lee, came in shortly after 4 o'clock with her youngster. Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, who sported a purple hat, was accompanied by young Shearer Norris, who paraded happily in her pink cotton frock.

Taking movies of the children as they climbed up onto the stand to pirouette was Mrs. Bacon, who wore a dotted green frock with a ruffle edging the jacket. Miss Marion Lubin, who joins her brother, Dr. Isador Lubin, here in his country place quite often, was talking of the trials of the commuter, especially one between Washington and Worcester, Mass.

Mrs. Mary Howard Gillespie (with the aid of a microphone) described the various children's costumes. Mrs. F. L. Whitehouse and Mrs. J. G. Mackinley were displaying the many warm jackets, caps, sweaters, etc., that the energetic women had made to be shipped overseas. Meanwhile, many took a curious peek at the Paisley shawl which Queen Victoria had presented to her lady in waiting. The shawl, contributed by Mrs. Leland Harrison, is to be raffled and the proceeds will go toward buying materials.

Capital Whirl

Among those present—to mention but a few, in addition to the usual group of diplomats and officials—were Mr. and Mrs. Michael Arlen, Countess Palffy, Miss Louise Boyd, the famous explorer; Admiral and Mrs. John Towers, Mrs. William Astor Chandler, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Will Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. S. Sloan Colt, Field Marshal and Lady John Dill, Admiral and Mrs. Herbert Seymour Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Finletter, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Randall Jacobs, Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Byrd Lacy.

Philippine President Manuel Quezon stopped in to pay his respects. Spyro Skouras, president of the Greek War Relief, and newly elected head of Twentieth Century-Fox, was there; also Sir Henry Self and, literally, hundreds of others.

His Majesty today will go to New York where a number of fetes will center around him the next few days. This evening, Harold Stirling Vanderbilt, honorary national chairman of the Greek War Relief Society, and Mrs. Vanderbilt will entertain 200 guests in honor of King George, the party taking place in the Crystal Garden of the Ritz-Carlton. Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler will entertain at a dinner for His Majesty tomorrow evening; Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop W. Aldrich will give a reception on Thursday, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Watson will be hosts at a reception on Friday afternoon, also in honor of King George.

Mr. Watson, who met His Majesty during his tour of Europe as president of the International Chamber of Commerce, was decorated by the Greek monarch with the Cross of Commander of the Royal Order of King George I of Greece. Among others who will entertain for King George II is Countess Mercati, the former Marie Manice of New York. Her husband, who is still in Greece, served as grand marshal of the Greek court for many years.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Eisenhower Offered OWI Post Under Davis

Milton Eisenhower, chief of the War Relocation Authority, can be administrative officer of the new Office of War Information if he wishes. He has been offered the job but he's reported to be reluctant to leave WRA. Eisenhower is a former Agriculture press agent who was drawn into administrative work by his sheer ability. He's a pioneer in Government information work and he helped to map out the new over-all information agency. He's just the man to operate OWI while Elmer Davis lays down policy. Archibald MacLeish is reported to have been offered the job of deputy director in charge of domestic press relations.

Another former Agriculture press agent who is making good in administrative work is Sam Bledsoe. Secretary Wickard yesterday appointed Sam chief of the Office of Agricultural War Relations. Sam is also vice chairman and administrative officer of the new Foods Requirements Commission. Clifford Townsend, former chief of OAWR, has been appointed boss of Triple A . . . William Hitz, jr., Assistant United States District Attorney, has an excellent chance to get one of the judgeships on the new local court.

Interior Undersecretary John Dempsey has sent a letter of resignation to the White House. He'll run for Governor of New Mexico. Mike Straus, the press agent, is odds-on favorite to succeed him. Dempsey is also chairman of the interdepartmental committee on subversive organizations . . . Raymond Rubicam, the advertising bigwig, is special assistant to Paul McNutt. Frederic Willam Wile, jr., assists Rubicam. . . . New employes at the Procurement Division will be put through an orientation course. The instructors will be Lee Schooler and Murray Cramer.

Paul McNutt continues to stack his agencies with Hoosiers. The latest is Dr. Edward C. Elliott, president of Purdue, who has been appointed coordinator of student war training . . . No action on the pay raise bills for at least another week. Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee is leaving the city for the remainder of the week. Meantime, Budget Bureau and Civil Service officials are working on a compromise bill. The Rules Committee, however, will okay the bill that would give custodial employes long overdue pay raises.

Harrison to Army, Report

W. H. Harrison, War Production Board production chief, is reported to have resigned to accept a colonel's commission in the War Department. Many insiders at WPB are now fearful the entire production division will be transferred to War . . . Treasury employes have set a good example for other Federal workers by subscribing 10 per cent of their salaries for war bonds. It took just 11 days to put Treasury over the top. Now similar drives will start in all other departments. Civil Service Exams: Navy aviation instructor, $2600 to $3800; Blueprint operator and photostat operator, $1260 to $1440 . . . Seventeen-year-olds who will be 18 by October 1 can now file for junior typist and stenographer tests.

Office of Emergency Management's press division employes had a hectic time yesterday. The division was abolished by the President in the order that set up the Office of War Information. Yesterday was pay day and Treasury refused to pay the OEM employes. The pay checks came through, however, after several hot exchanges. The division had many outstanding employes and before the day was over attractive offers had been made to more than a score. The employes have nothing to worry about. They'll all be assigned to one of the many new war agencies instead of working exclusively for OEM. The general purpose of the over-all order was to centralize informational activities. That part of the order that abolishes the OEM press division decentralized information work.

Asbury Park, N. J., June 15 (AP).—OPA regulations on price ceilings presented a department store here with a delicate problem. The customer, whose account is highly valued, returned a purchase and interrupted the salesman's assurance it was the floor mop she had ordered.

"Why, it has 'ceiling' stamped right on the ticket," she said.

They Must Like the Place

Snow Hill, Md., June 15 (AP).—A bolt of lightning flashed along the cells at the Worcester County Jail, knocked open the big iron gate—but not one of the 14 prisoners made a move to escape.

"They just began to yell blue murder, they were scared so badly," said Deputy Sheriff Gordon Bowen.

Students Told They Are Entering World 'On Brink of Disaster'

Although they are approaching man's estate at a time when it "appears that our civilization is on the very brink of full, absolute and complete destruction," the 106 graduates of Gonzaga High School were counseled last night that their time "has not yet come" to become "soldiers in the war for human rights."

But, Postmaster General Frank C. Walker told them at the school's ninety-third commencement exercises in Memorial Continental Hall, "it is your duty to prepare, to make ready. Those who guide the destinies of this nation have made this your first, your present, your appointed task. The faith that is yours tells you that Divine Providence shall care for the future."

Conferees To Reconsider Housing Bill

By Christine Sadler

Post Staff Writer

Promise of a break in the Congressional deadlock that is holding up construction of dormitories for war workers in Washington was given yesterday when the House agreed to resume conferences with the Senate.

There is no indication, however, that the new conferees will yield in their opposition to the Senate proposal that 3000 family dwelling units be covered in the same appropriation measure.

If the Senate wants more than the specified 12 million dollars for 15,000 dormitory units, it is believed the House will agree. It's not a matter of money, House members insisted yesterday—but of a definite belief that the Government's war housing program here should be confined to dormitories.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, said the House committee went into the problem thoroughly and found no need for houses. He said it was shown in hearings that private builders are ready to build 40,000 family dwelling units as part of the war construction program here.

Representative Cannon (Democan) of New York said the House Appropriations Subcommittee which recommended $29,500,000 for District housing needs, and Representative Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, joined with Taber in telling the House there was no need for separate family houses built by the Government.

These three were reappointed to meet with the Senate subcommittee to try again to reach a conclusion that will send the bill to the President. Also reappointed to the House conference group were Representatives Ludlow, Snyder, O'Neal, Johnson of West Virginia, Johnson of Oklahoma, Rabaut, Wigglesworth, Lambertson and Ditter.

Legislation was proposed last June to amend the Lanham Act to permit the District to share war housing funds formerly earmarked for workers in industrial centers.

Six months ago the amendment was agreed to and 50 million dollars was authorized for the Washington area. The House Appropriations Subcommittee cut this amount to $29,500,000 by eliminating the housing unit estimates. The Senate raised the amount to 43 million dollars by insisting on 3000 units.

Both were in agreement on the 12 million dollars for 15,000 dormitory units. In addition to dormitories and houses, $17,500,000 in badly needed utilities and hospital repairs are deadlocked in the congressional controversy.

D. C. Symphony To Give First of 4 Concerts Tonight

The first of a series of four National Symphony concerts under the guest direction of Guy Fraser Harrison, conductor of the Rochester Civic Orchestra, will be given tonight at the Potomac Water Gate. Wednesday night's concert was moved up because of the blackout.

Featured soloist on tonight's program will be Margaret Speaks, radio soprano, who will sing "Depuis le Jour," from the opera, "Louise." Conductor Harrison told The Post yesterday he prayed there would be no wind or thunder so that the audience might fully appreciate the exquisite delicacy of some of the passages of Mozart's Symphony in G Minor which is to be given this evening.

Harrison who was born in England, mentioned the fact that the most important part of his early career was the period of six years he spent conducting in the Philippines. He called the present plight of the islands and of his many friends who are still there "heartbreaking." While in the islands he was organist and choirmaster of the Cathedral of St. Mary and St. John, in Manila. He also taught at the University of the Philippines.

Entries in 'Ideal Father' Contest Close Tomorrow

Somewhere in Washington or one of its suburbs there is today a man to whom Father's Day—next Sunday—will be an extra special occasion. Who he is going to be no one knows, but Friday the Ideal Father of 1942 will be announced.

He may be your own dad, or haven't you put him in nomination yet by writing a letter telling what he's like and mailing it to the Father's Day Editor, in care of this newspaper? Whether he's tall or short, a banker or an humble clerk, you sort of owe it to him to put down on paper what a great fellow he is.

Butt don't forget to do it right away, for tomorrow is the deadline for receiving entries. Letters in a pencilled scrawl are just as welcome as typewritten ones. Neatness doesn't count. The sincerity of your letter and the build-up it gives dad are what matter.

And you don't have to make an angel of your candidate. Look at these excerpts from one letter that came in from Alexandria:

"He's fat and 50 . . . He hasn't any hair, that is, the little he does have doesn't count and yet he faithfully travels to the barber shop to have it trimmed . . . He has four daughters . . . always wanted a son and when he didn't have one he said it was all mother's fault . . . He's a big tease, but don't try to return the same. It wouldn't be funny then."

Hurry, hurry, hurry with those letters. Wednesday will be here tomorrow, and on Friday morning we will give you Washington's Ideal Father of 1942.

Cabs Operate On Different Rates Here

Confusion Reigns As Some Say 'Yes,' Others 'No' on PUC Tariff Orders

Confusion as to whether the Public Utilities Commission's order for new taxi rates was or was not stayed by the District Court appeal of the United Taxicab Drivers, Inc., was intensified yesterday as the split within the PUC spread to the cab industry.

Six major companies of the District of Columbia Cab Owners Association decided to follow the minority opinion of PUC Chairman Gregory Hankin and inaugurated the new rate schedule last night. Other companies, however, abided by the advice of PUC Commissioners James Flanagan and Charles Kutz, the District Hack Inspector, and the Corporation Counsel's office and announced that they would operate under the old rates until the court hearing on the union's petition is held.

The union appealed the PUC order for new rates Friday, alleging that it would be an invasion of constitutional rights and would cause "irreparable and substantial damages." By generally accepted interpretation of the District code, this automatically stays the order until a hearing can be held.

Arguments Friday

Arguments on this appeal are scheduled to be held in the District Court Friday. Earlier yesterday this appeal was set by Justice Jesse C. Adkins for Thursday, but Assignment Commissioner John H. Sullivan postponed it a day because of heavy schedule of court proceedings.

A counter appeal by the PUC for dismissal of the union's appeal will be filed in court today, Lloyd B. Harrison, assistant corporation counsel for the PUC, said last night.

The six companies which have started on the complex new rate system of dividing the city into four major zones and 21 subzones are the Arrow, Bell, Checker, Premier, Yellow and Washington lines. Among the principal companies retaining the old system are the Diamond, the Blue Light, Federal and Globe.

"The last official order we had was that the new rates should go into effect at 12:01 a. m. Monday morning," John H. Royer, jr., president of the Cab Owners' Association, said. "Since we have had no word to the contrary except newspaper reports, we decided to tell our men to start charging the new rates. We've been trying to get these new rates since June, 1941, and now at the last moment, nobody knows whether we have them or not."

Keech, Hankin Disagree

Newspaper reports, and published statements from the majority of the utilities commissioners do constitute adequate public notice, Keech said.

"If a man were haled into court for violating the PUC regulations by charging the new rates, his only excuse would be that he couldn't read," Keech said. "Otherwise he would face prosecution for willful violation of the PUC regulations."

Hankin was equally insistent that any driver now operating under the old rates was violating the commission's orders.

Royer, who gave Hankin's dissenting opinion and a general impatience on the part of the industry as the reasons why his six companies were starting in on the new order, said that the Corporation Counsel's office had informed him that it would be hard to get a conviction on either charge.

Charging that the more generally held interpretation of that section of the code which would stay the order leads to "absurd results," Hankin gave six reasons why he thought the cab drivers should go on and adopt the new schedule without waiting for the court hearing.

Amendment to 1935 Law

This particular section of the code is an amendment to the Public Utilities Law adopted by Congress in 1935 and designed, Hankin said, to avoid the granting of temporary restraining orders without notice to the commission. He said he did not think that in passing this amendment Congress intended that the mere filing of a petition by a person having no standing in court should be able to enjoin the order of the commission, or that thousands of persons who might be benefited by the order should suffer from a restraining order obtained for the relief of one person. This one person, he thought, should be forced to put up bond for the possible damage he might cause others.

Furthermore, he said that a succession of such petitions could hold up the order for the entire 90 days allowed between the order and the deadline for filing such an appeal. He said that the commission had received and issued no restraining order, therefore the drivers are apparently expected to act upon hearsay.

To date the PUC has issued no official statement to clarify the problem

Compromise On Housing Code Ready

A compromise bill for the regulation of District housing will be offered in Congress Thursday as a result of a meeting yesterday when District officials and members of the Washington Housing Association settled their differences over the proposed regulations.

The new bill will ask that the District be enabled to demand prison sentences for violators of the housing act, that condemnation proceedings against houses judged unsanitary and unhealthful be speeded up, and that houses placarded by the Health Department be closed until the offending causes be corrected. At present new tenants can be moved in the day after the premises are vacated.

However, the Housing Association's plea that a new housing code be drafted was finally abandoned because of the insistence of District officials that the 1892 authorization gave the District ample power to regulate housing conditions.

Revision Agreed On

"To request a new code at this time would defeat the exact thing you're asking for," Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech told the Housing Association representatives. "It would cause a maximum delay, and would accomplish nothing. You have not proven any deficiencies in the basic code."

He admitted, however, that for all the powers the District could claim under this basic code, it had perhaps not done enough to regulate housing conditions. A general revision by the District of its regulations was agreed upon.

The District's stand was that lack of inspection personnel and not of authority was the principal trouble with the housing administration. Assistant Engineer Commissioner Beverly C. Snow and Assistant Corporation Counsel Vernon West upheld District Health Officer George C. Ruhland, and Building Inspector Robert Davis in this point.

Funds for Inspectors

Keech said that the only legislation needed was for additional appropriation for these inspectors and the authority to correct the three deficiencies of enforcement that was included in the compromise bill.

The Housing Association, represented by J. Bernard Wyckoff and Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, replied that specific request for a housing code probably would show far more than three gaps in the regulations, and that it would act as a springboard for getting appropriations.

"Congress is on the spot now because of the newspaper editorials about the housing conditions here," Wyckoff said. "They'll probably be anxious to help us out, but only if we come to them with something specific and positive to offer."

Also attending the meeting were Horace Peasley of the Washington Building Congress, John Ihlder of the Alley Dwelling Authority and Dr. L. F. Schmedebier of the Brookings Institution.

College of Music Presents Chanaka in Piano Recital

Washington College of Music presents Anthony Chanaka in a piano recital in Phillips Memorial Gallery. Program: Prelude and Fugue in F sharp minor (Bach), Exercises in D minor, F minor and C major (Scarlatti), Sonata in F sharp minor (Brahms), Preludes Nos. 3, 4 and 5 (Debussy), Rondo, Op. 29 (Mendelssohn).

Phillips Memorial Gallery was filled yesterday afternoon by friends of Anthony Chanaka, the third young musician to receive the award of an artist diploma from the Washington College of Music during the past decade. His piano recital displayed the qualities of interpretation and technique which won him the honor, and the listeners were able to appreciate the reasons why his work had been pronounced meritorious. Artist diplomas, when carefully bestowed, are not conferred for skill alone but for an aesthetic perception that informs and animates the application of that skill.

BROWN

On the evidence of his playing, Mr. Chanaka regards technique as the servant of interpretation and not as the means to acquire an empty virtuosity. His seriousness and his artistic sensitivity were immediately apparent in Bach's F sharp minor prelude and fugue, which he treated like a tone picture and not like a problem in counterpoint. In place of a bravura brilliance, there were delicacies of color and refinements of phrasing, indicating his conviction that Bach was a poet and not a pedant. The same tinting of tone was applied to three of Domenico Scarlatti's exercises.

He securely passed the greatest test of his musicianship in his fine reading of Brahms' F sharp minor sonata, a work which requires for its adequate disclosure an instinctive sense of poetic values. It is not enough to play the notes of this sonata with fluency and ease, but the performer must get beneath the surface and touch the romantic core of the music. This Mr. Chanaka did with a penetration that revealed his own romantic temperament.

After his sympathetic approach to Brahms and his patent understanding of the sonata's essence, one was not unprepared for his perceptive handling of Debussy in three of the preludes: "The Wind on the Plain," "The Sounds and Perfumes Swirl in the Evening Air" and "The Hills of Anacapri." Their atmospheric charm was evoked by the temperance of his dynamics and the lightness of his touch.

In the one showy work on the program, Mendelssohn's duo rondo, in which he was companioned by Fanny Roberts, he gave loose rein to his digital expertness and played with a brilliancy which he had previously repressed. Brilliance is not, however, the important thing in Mr. Chanaka's equipment, for he has the more valuable qualities of insight and poetic eloquence. He is not a flawless performer, and for that very reason a more interesting musician.

Your Daily Health Quiz
How Many Quarts of Blood Has the Average Person?
It is an accepted fact that normally we have 9 to 9½ quarts of blood.
Although our blood constitutes about 1/12 of our body weight, most folks pay no attention to it whatsoever. When they feel tired or under the weather, they always blame it on something else. Actually, at the first sign of fatigue, lack of energy, strength, or when you feel yourself slipping physically, check up on your blood right away.
You know, if your blood is thin, pale and watery, and unable to feed the hungry tissues with life-giving oxygen, sickness and disease in more quickly. But if blood is rich and pure, it contains chemical substances and cells capable of repairing damaged body tissues and replenishing our strength and energy.
So don't take chances. Do something about your blood today. Get a bottle of Sanoxyl (pronounced Sano-Kay) Tablets. Here is an amazing new discovery, by an eminent New York chemist, that is designed to build rich red strong blood. It contains, in concentrated quantities, the raw materials so woefully lacking in the modern diet, and so urgently needed by the body tissues . . . the most important being the active principle of raw liver (the red blood cell maturing factor), organic vegetable iron and other minerals, vitamin B complex, fortified with pure crystalline vitamins B and D, and ionized calcium and phosphorous. This "three point" tonic is sometimes called anti-anemic substances.
Try Sanoxyl Tablets for 9 days. If you don't have your blood count taken by your physician before and after this one. If you don't feel like a new person, have gained all-around improvement . . . and more of all, show a worthwhile increase in your red blood cell count . . . your money will be cheerfully refunded.

Owners' Strike Halts Racing at Suffolk Downs

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

En Route to Cleveland With the Low Men on the American League Totem Pole, June 14.—This would recommend itself as the time to belt the daylights out of the Nats, who have now struck bottom in the American League pennant race, but we submerge the urge to get tough with 'em, though it would be the path of least resistance. The poor devils are hurting already. There hasn't been much sweetness and light for the Washington athletes this season.

POVICH

The Nats have been acting like a very bad ball team, but on one score there can be no quarrel with them. They have been losing, for the most part, in the thrill-manner. Three consecutive last-inning defeats by the Cleveland Indians were tough to take, but they were strictly customers' games and in no manner drab. The Nats were in there trying hard in their inadequate sort of way.

The wonder is that the Nats didn't hit the cellar long before yesterday. Dutch Leonard, with his broken leg in a cast, has missed ten starting assignments and he was the best pitcher on the team. The pitching has bogged down pitifully with Buck Newsom losing five starts in a row and Sid Hudson pitching like an in-and-outer. Bucky Harris knew that the Nats would go only as far as his pitching would take 'em this season, and the worst has happened to his staff.

Harris' talent otherwise has been flopping in painful unison. Mickey Vernon, supposedly one of the better hitters in the league, hasn't been able to get up a gallop with his bat. Jake Early's season-long slump is a deep mystery. Bob Repass doesn't even faintly resemble the spring training camp sensation in Florida. Bobby Estalella's hitting has faded to a whisper and Stan Spence is, as he admits, now swinging a bat "like an old woman." It is a pretty dismal picture.

Capital Fans Have Been Kindly

The amazing truth is that the Washington crowds have been holding up well. Attendance is far ahead of last year, and the booing has been virtually nonexistent. The customers have been on the kindly side in appreciation of Harris' helplessness. "The fans have been wonderful," said Harris today. "We realize now that for every boo we hear, there are hundreds of folks in the stands who have their fingers crossed hoping our next man will get a hit."

The fan support was brought home to Harris earlier in the season. He received a telephone call from a man who said, "I'm the owner of a tavern in northeast Washington, and I have the interest of your club at heart. I wanted to tell you that one of your ball players has been in my place every night for a week and he isn't keeping in shape. His name is ———. I thought you'd like to know it." The next day Harris shipped the fellow back to the minors, after thanking his informant.

The paradox is that the Nats have dropped into the cellar almost at the precise time when Harris' team, other than his pitching, seemed to be vastly improved. Roy Cullenbine from the Browns has been giving the batting order a punch it has lacked since Stan Spence tailed off in his hitting. Cullenbine, with his switch-hitting, has offset the awful weakness of the club against left-handed pitching and has bolstered the outfield.

At last, Harris had seemed to hit upon a competent outfield. Repass, a failure at shortstop, has done well defensively at third base and has even been making some hits. The Chattanooga pair of Ellis Clary-Johnny Sullivan, whom Harris installed at second base and shortstop has stepped up the double-play production tremendously, and there are definite signs that they have brought something valuable to the Nats.

Rookie Clary Has Given Club Lift

Little Clary with his fire-and-brimstone play has put new life into the club, and it may be significant that he was in the hosiptal when the Nats lost a double-header to the White Sox. Without Clary, the club lapsed into its dead-fish stride on Sunday. With him they have always managed to battle it out, at least until the late innings.

Sullivan and Clary have been working together better than any second base-shortstop combination Harris has hit upon since the season started, and Sullivan has indicated that he is a batting threat. Within the past week, Harris has put on the field his best team of the season, only to watch it lapse into the cellar on account of pitching failures.

The flop of his pitching has been a bitter pill for Harris who had great hopes for his staff in the South. Without Leonard, it has no anchor man, and Leonard will not pitch for another month. In the last ten games, only one Washington pitcher has gone the full route. He was Walter Masterson who, in his next start, was belted for six runs in the first inning. There have been games when there was more stuff on the ball coming from the catcher than it had when it left the pitcher's hand. That's the chief reason why the Nats are where they are.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 15.—The sway-backed principals in one of the great and engaging stories of the turf, Exterminator and Sun Briar, came home to Binghamton, N. Y., the other day to live out the rest of their days and years in a kind of horse heaven on earth. Each is 27, the equine equivalent of a human age of 80.

CONSIDINE

Jane Kilmer, widow of the man who owned these two great thoroughbreds, decided to bring them up to Binghamton from Court Manor, near New Market, Va. Sun Briar had been there since 1923, during which time his sons and daughters, including Sun Beau, won enough money to make him one of the three leading living sires. Exterminator, greatest gelding ever bred in this country, went to the Virginia place 10 years ago and becamé its benevolent dictator.

Sun Briar and Exterminator . . . they combined to make an indelible story, once upon a time.

The furore caused last month by Shut Out, when this lowly regarded stablemate of Devil Diver won the Kentucky Derby, was as nothing compared to the shock of Exterminator's victory in the 1918 Derby. For Exterminator was the ugliest of the ducklings. His very presence in Matt Winn's race was accidental, and a source of many prerace condolences by the friends of Willis Sharpe Kilmer. Old Bones, as the turf world learned to know and love Exterminator, was destined to have the role of manservant to Sun Briar.

Sun Briar was the richly bred prince of the Kilmer stable. He had been undisputed 2-year-old champion of 1917. He had ruled favorite in the winter books for the 1918 Derby. Kilmer's confidence in him was so boundless that in his feverish disappointment over the woes that befell Sun Briar, he turned on the patient and game Exterminator.

Perhaps you know the story. Perhaps you don't. We picked it up piecemeal from Cal Milam, who sold Exterminator to Kilmer a week or so before the 1918 Derby for $12,000 and two yearlings, and from Uncle Henry McDaniel, who was Kilmer's trainer that month.

Exterminator, who was to set records for patience, was a wild 'un in the nursery of his breeder, F. D. Knight, and even wilder when Milam bought him for $1500 early in his life. Milam had him gelded for his own sake, and liked his chances so much that that led to the naming of him. Milam asked his wife to think up a name for a horse that was going to wipe out all competition, and Mrs. Milam promptly laughed, "Why not Exterminator?"

Exterminator ran only four times as a 2-year-old. He won twice and finished fourth the other times. He didn't race after July of his 2-year-old year. By the time the next spring came around nobody knew him or wanted to know him. Sun Briar was the darling of the country. Nonetheless, Exterminator was working well at Churchill Downs when Sun Briar arrived for what seemed to be a cinch victory in the Derby. But Sun Briar wasn't doing too well. He had not wintered well.

It was decided that he needed a workhorse—a good, fast nag who could push him in his morning works, and then drop back and build up the winning spirit and speed in Sun Briar. Uncle Henry began looking around for such a nonentity, and found Exterminator with the aid of a friendly clocker.

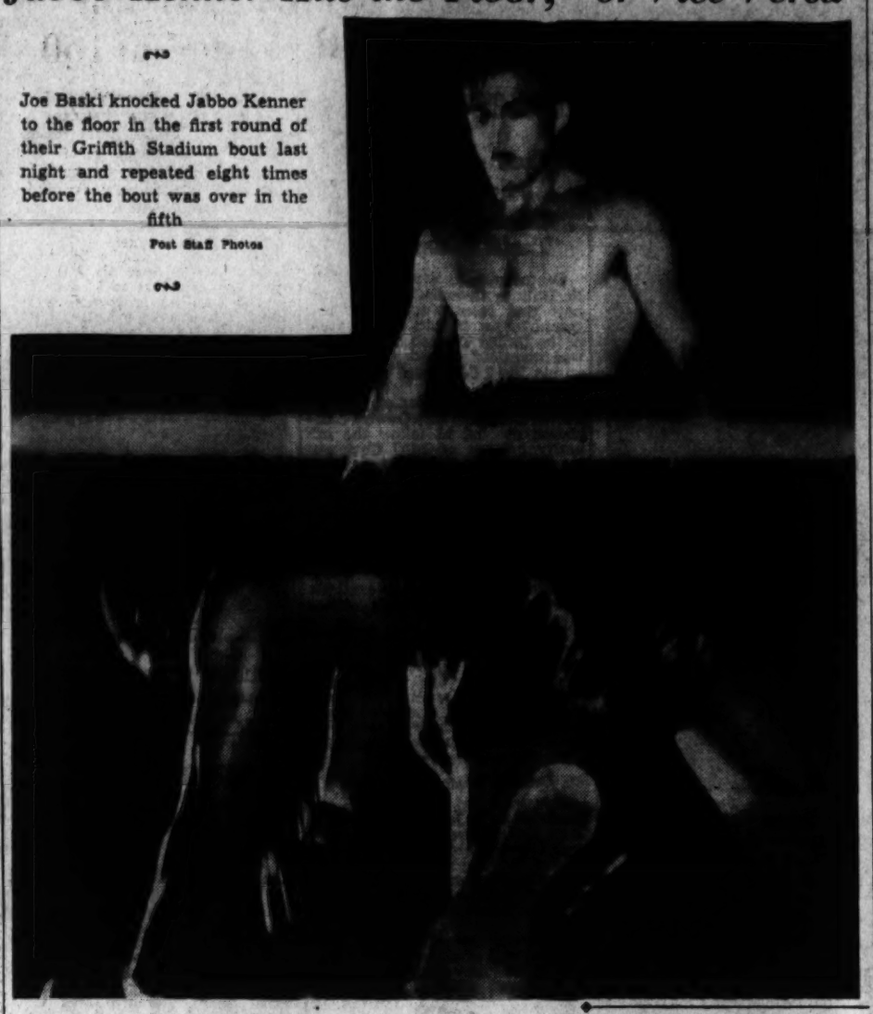

Kilmer raised cain over the price Uncle Henry agreed upon, and a few days later, when Sun Briar beat Exterminator easily in a special morning test, Kilmer was convinced that Uncle Henry had bought a dud. "I told you he didn't have a heart," he cried triumphantly. Uncle Henry saved his breath, for he knew that he had to break the news to Kilmer that Sun Briar wouldn't be ready to run in the Derby.

It was a terrific blow to Kilmer, but a day or two before the race he decided he wanted his colors in the Derby, after making the trip to Louisville, and irately gave McDaniel permission to enter any of the eligible Kilmer horses—"even Exterminator." Old Bones won, you know, and paid $61.20. He went on to become a symbol of endurance. He ran 100 times and won 50, was second 17 times and third 17 times. He ran until he was a 9-year-old, and made appearances at tracks when he was a 10-year-old—because he grieved so much over being left behind when the youngsters went off to the races. He worked under eight different trainers, a couple of them masters of the hypo, and the chart on his last race, at leaky-roofed Dorval Park, in Canada, said he was making his move at the head of the stretch when he faltered, at long last, and hobbled to a halt on his bad leg.

He never asked for anything in his life, except a chance to race. He met them all. As a 7-year-old he beat the streaking Billy Kelly, in a three-quarter mile race, to open the season, and closed it by beating Rosters in the Pimlico Cup at 2¼ miles for the fourth straight time.

Sun Briar went on to become a fine winner, too, but there was only one Exterminator. He'll be boss at the Binghamton "old men's home," and his faithful old playmate, Peanuts, a Shetland pony almost as old as he is, will carry out his orders if the New York winter brings rheumatism to the old boy who has human traits without human failings.

Kenner Knocked Out By Baksi in 5th Round

District Heavy Floored Nine Times Before Meager 1700 at Stadium

By Tony Neri

Post Staff Writer

Joe Baksi, rising young Polish fighter of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., last night caught Jabbo Kenner, ranked No. 1 among District heavyweights, flush on the chin in 1:53 of the fifth round and sent the colored Washingtonian spinning to the deck, a knockout victim, before 1700 Griffith Stadium fans. Baksi was the complete master throughout the scheduled 8-rounder.

Kenner was knocked to the canvas nine times in the short contest. Twice the bell intervened as the colored heavyweight was stretched on the floor, knowing not where or how the blow came that felled him. Baksi, a 20-year-old who has been fighting professionally two years, mixed his shots up, generally working on the body with his left and then shifting to his right very effectively against Kenner's jaw.

Kenner, visibly hurt and on the point of exhaustion, did fight back, and in the third round it appeared that he might swing the contest his way. After being on the deck twice, for nine counts, he came back to connect with a pair of lefts and his right, which in the past has put the chill on 11 opponents. But there the damage stopped.

Bell Keeps Saving

In the next round Baksi resumed his hitting practice by pelting the game Washingtonian. He tried desperately to put Kenner away in this heat and had him on the floor os the bell sounded with Referee Bowen reaching the count of seven.

As the fifth and last round began, it appeared that it wouldn't go much farther as Kenner showed signs of collapsing from exhaustion. Baksi was taking pot shots and Kenner didn't seem to know how to protect himself. The Polish boy put over a sharp left hook which shook Kenner and as the colored heavyweight came in with a left he was met with the final blow of the fight—a hard, straight right that spelled finis.

Kenner went down flat on his back, rolled over once, and as Referee Bowen reached 10, the colored heavyweight was making a feeble attempt to arise.

After the fight Promoter Joe Turner announced that the winner would meet either Claudio Villar,

Clay Courts Tennis Delayed By Weather

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, June 15.—The National Clay Courts tennis tournament was officially opened this afternoon with three society queens participating in a flag-raising ceremony, but that was as far as the weather permitted it to go today.

There were a few skeptics who said that was as far as the tournament should go, considering the absence of all top-ranking stars except Billy Talbert of Cincinnati, the No. 10 national player. The other nine—netsters with box-office appeal like Frankie Parker, Bobby Riggs, Bitsy Grant and Frank Kovacs—are in military service, war work or have turned professional.

Although the field was perhaps the weakest in the tournament's long history, officials were a bit optimistic. They recalled that Bill Tilden jumped into tennis prominence in the war year of 1918, winning the Clay Courts for his first national championship, and they were hopeful some heretofore unknown would use this year's event as a similar springboard to fame.

When, and if, play gets under way tomorrow, the opening matches will feature Talbert, seeded No. 1, in a meeting with William Culver of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Francisco Segura Cano, champion of Ecuador, playing a St. Louisan, and Armando Veg of Mexico against Eric Pratt of Kalamazoo, Mich. Rolando Vega, the other half of the championship doubles team of Mexico, drew a first round bye.

Hagen Selects 11 Golf Stars For Cup Match

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 15.—Walter Hagen, whose golfing exploits of the last 15 years are pretty much wrapped up in the American Ryder Cup team, announced tonight that 11 golfers had been invited to comprise his challengers who meet the cup team here July 18 and 19 in war-orphaned matches for Red Cross relief.

Hagen, captain of all six American teams of picked professional stars that met Great Britain before war interrupted the series, said Lawson Little of San Francisco, sensation of last week's Inverness Invitational meet at Toledo, and Henry Picard of Oklahoma City would be key men in the challenger front.

The 49-year-old Hagen plans to participate in foursome matches, but he will leave singles competition to younger players, including Sam Byrd of Ardmore, Pa.; Ed Dudley of Colorado Springs, Melvin (Chick) Harbert of Battle Creek, Mich.; Jimmy Thomson of Chicopee, Mass.; Harry Cooper of Minneapolis, Al Watrous of Detroit and Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va.

Others on the invitation list are Corps. Jim Turnesa and Ed (Porky) Oliver, both of Fort Dix, N. J. Sir Walter said the list was by no means complete and that he would ask Bobby Jones, who captained the challengers to victory last year, to join the 1942 squad.

The Ryder matches will be staged over the Oakland Hills course, scene of the 1924 and 1937 National Opens, where two years ago the transplanted cup match bringing together Hagen's team and Gene Sarazen's challengers produced $18,500 for the Red Cross. Hagen's team won, 7 to 5, but last year his cuppers lost by the same margin to Jones' challengers. Last year's proceeds of $12,800 went to the United Service Organizations.

Charlotte Blanks Norfolk Under Lights

Charlotte, N. C., June 15 (AP).—Charlotte's Hornets splurged with four runs in the seventh here tonight and defeated the Norfolk Tars, 4-0. Eckenroth, the Bee hurler, held the Tars to six scattered hits, while his mates collected 11 off two Norfolk moundsmen.

Horsemen Demand 20% Purse Hike

Turfmen, Officials Fail to Agree on Demands After Two Lengthy Conferences

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 15.—The first horsemen's strike in the 10-year-old history of New England pari-mutuel racing—a strike over demands for increases in all purses—today resulted in the cancellation of tomorrow's eight-race program at Suffolk Downs.

That action resulted when only eight of the 1000-odd thoroughbreds quartered at the track, representing almost 200 different owners, were designated as starters in tomorrow's overnight events.

Earlier a group of owners and trainers, who had identified themselves as "Horsemen of Suffolk Downs," presented a petition to Charles F. Adams, president of the Eastern Racing Association, that called for a 20 per cent increase in all purses for the duration of the 60-day meeting, which reached its halfway mark last Saturday.

Adams' Statement

Adams said:

"I told the representatives of the horsemen that 'we are willing to go part of the way with you, but we can't go all the way. We are doing all we can afford to do, for we cannot forstell what the future has in store for taxation and for transportation, and we could not make promises that we might not be able to keep.'"

Later three owner-trainers, Johnny McDowell, Phil Bieber and Harold Simmons, who acted as spokesmen for the horsement, notified Racing Secretary Charles J. McClennan that they had revised their demand to a minimum purse of $1200 instead of $1000 for the rest of the meeting.

In their petition to Adams, the horsemen pointed out that the upkeep of horses had increased "far in excess of 30 per cent" and that they were unable to make both ends meet even under the most favorable conditions. They also pointed out that the Suffolk Downs handle for the first half of its 1942 meeting totaled $13,005,735, an increase of $1,938,707 over that same period last year.

After the track management refused to boost its minimum purses, which the Narragansett Racing Association at Pawtucket, R. I., did recently, Adams said:

Can't Race Without Horses

"The entry boxes will be open as usual tomorrow. If they want to make entries, it will be all right, if not, all right, too. If the same situation prevails tomorrow, there will not be any racing on Wednesday. We can't race without horses."

Meanwhile, the horsemen have been assured by the jockeys that they will not accept any mounts until the owners and trainers have settled their differences with the management. The track grooms also have agreed to refuse to lead any more horses from the stables to the paddock until then.

This interruption will be the second New England racing has suffered in five years.

Back in 1937, Robert E. Quinn, then Governor of Rhode Island, called upon the National Guard of his State to close the Narragansett track when its management refused to oust the late Walter O'Hara as its president.

Passeau's 5-Hitter Stops Dodgers, 6-0

Right-Hander Retires First 18 Men to Face Him as He Wins Eighth Straight, Tenth of Yer

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 15.—Claude Passeau blanked the Dodgers with five hi[ts] tonight to pitch the Chicago Cubs to a 6-to-0 victory over the league leaders in a twilight game. It was Passeau's tenth win of the year, his eighth in a row.

Not a single Dodger got beyond second base and only two reached that point as Passeau, facing the 1941 pennant winners for the first time this year, handcuffed them completely from start to finish, leaving 15,159 fans loaded with gloom. The husky right-hander retired the first 18 men to face him in order.

Mean time, the Cubs, whipping the Dodgers for only the second time this season, landed on young Ed Head, Johnny Allen and Larry French for a dozen hits. Three of these—a double and a pair of singles—were collected by Lou Novikoff. Lou and Bill Nicholson each drove in a pair of runs.

The Cubs sewed the game up as early as the second inning, when Jimmy Foxx walked and Novikoff brought him home with the two-bagger.

Nats Move West, Newsom Hurling at Cleveland Tonight

The Nats, seeking a change in the fortunes which deposited them in the league cellar last weekend, entrained 1st night for a swing through the West. Their tour commences tonight with a night game in Cleveland.

Buck Newsom, his last start marred by the loss of a 2-to-0 lead in the ninth inning against the Tigers, will get the pitching job at Cleveland tonight.

Rookie Second Baseman Ellis Clary accompanied the Washington team after being discharged from Georgetown University Hospital, where he had been under observation after being struck on the head by Pitcher Joe Haynes of the White Sox on Saturday night. Clary will be in the line-up tonight.

The Nats will be joined tomorrow by Pitcher Ray Scarborough, right-hander, called in from the Chattanooga club. Following a three-game series at Cleveland, the club moves to Detroit for three games.

Mrs. Leo Walper's 79 Wins District Women's Golf Medal

Mrs. Meckley Is Second With an 82

Mrs. Brandon Takes Third, Posting an 83; Medalist Putts Well; Nine Flights Filled

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. Leo J. Walper found the putting touch necessary for low scoring on the velvet-like greens of the Chevy Chase Club to win medal honors in the District Women's Golf Championship yesterday with a 41-38,79, three shots ahead of an all-time record field.

Mrs. Walper, whose husband is one of this section's outstanding professionals, hit the ball well from tee to green in most cases and stroked it like a master on the putting surfaces to make a strong bid toward a title she won in 1939 and lost in 1940 in the final round.

Anytime a woman golfer cracks 80 on the long, watered Chevy Chase course it goes down as a fine round of golf and Mrs. Walper accomplished the feat yesterday despite two bad holes, a seven on the long eighth, where in her only putting error of the day she took three strokes with the mallet-head implement and a six on the fifteenth, where a straying drive caught the bordering ditch and cost a penalty stroke.

Medalist Off Her Game

Mrs. Walper, who competed in Miami through the winter and came home with the Miami Biltmore championship, played in most of the one-day affairs here earlier in the season and was off her usual game. But the Indian Spring shotmaker was in the groove yesterday as she one-putted eight greens and required only 29 taps for the round.

Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, a three-time former champion and co-favored with the defending titlist, Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, led a good sized Kenwood delegation in the first flight with the second best score of the day, a 42-40, 82. Mrs. Meckley was medal-minded as she went out in 42 and back in 3-5-4-3-4 for the first five holes of the back nine but on the fifteenth and sixteenth holes she ran into trouble, hitting ditches on both holes and taking big sixes.

Mrs. Thomas O. Brandon, last year's medalist from Columbia, was off to a repeat performance she turned the more difficult front nine in 40 strokes but she took 43 coming back, with a three-putt green and a six on the seventeenth where she dumped an approach shot short of

Feller Features Big Field Day Here

Rapid Robert, Now Chief Petty Officer in Navy, Will Pitch at 'Girl Meets Boy' Get-Together

Bob Feller will bring the most celebrated pitching arm of the generation to Griffith Stadium on Sunday for the monster field day sponsored by the special recreation service of the Metropolitan Office for Civilian Defense.

Chief Petty Officer Feller will pitch for his Norfolk Naval Base team against the Camp Lee Army team in the feature event of the day, with admission free.

The baseball game is being staged in conjunction with a giant "Girl Meets Boy" party to which 5000 girls in the Washington Government service will be invited to sit with thousands of soldiers and sailors from nearby encampments.

The special recreation service committee, headed by Mrs. Morris Cafritz, in anticipation of a capacity crowd of 32,000 has arranged a colorful program for the afternoon. The Army Air Force Band of 60 pieces will be in attendance, famed Songstress Jane Pickens and Soloist Gene Archer will sing, and there will be the pageantry of massed colors of the 26 United Nations.

Arch McDonald will be on the public address system in connection with the soldiers-sailors ball game, identifying the former professional ball players now with the service teams.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox of the Washington Provisional Brigade has made provisions for the housing and entertainment of the players of both teams while they are in Washington.

Feller, who has been detached from his naval duties in order that he may pitch for the Norfolk team, will be meeting up with, in Camp Lee, a club that has already beaten him once this season. On the Camp Lee team, as Feller's pitching opponent, will be Porter Vaughn, who often opposed Feller when Vaughan was a member of the Philadelphia Athletics. Clean-up hitter on the Camp Lee team is Jack Sanford, former Washington first baseman who was inducted into the Army last spring.

Coast Favored In Dual Meet With Big Ten

Evanston, Ill., June 15 (AP).—Short on numerical strength but heavy in power, the Pacific Coast Conference's track stars are expected to score by a solid margin over the Big Ten's best in tomorrow's sixth annual dual meet between the two collegiate leagues in Northwestern University's Dyche Stadium.

For reasons of economy the West Coast athletic heads decided to waive their right to bring the first, second and third place winners in each event of their conference meet, and send only the No. 1 and 2 men here. The Big Ten, however, will shoot its full strength in an effort to break the Pacific Coast's five year monopoly on this unique track affair.

While the Westerners, largely by dint of Southern California's crushing 85½ point victory in last Saturday's N. C. A. A. meet at Lincoln, Nebr., are heavily favored to beat the Big Ten, individual stars are about evenly divided.

Today the N. C. A. A. track and field committee announced its annual All-American collegiate track team, based on season's performances, and Pacific Coast athletes took 10 places to eight for the Big Ten. However Gwinn Smith, California pole vaulter, is not competing in this dual meet and Bob Biles, California javlin thrower, is out of luck because the Big Ten no longer conducts that event.

The full All-American collegiate track and field team, as announced by K. L. (Tug) Wilson, chairman of the N. C. A. A. track committee:

Mile run—Leslie Mac Mitchell, New York U.; Leroy Weed, Southern California; Robert Ginn, Nebraska.

Broad jump—William Christopher, Rice; Norwood Ewell, Penn State; Dallas Dupre, Ohio State.

Pole vault—Gwinn Smith, California; Harold Hunt, Nebraska; Jack Defield, Minnesota; A. Richmond Marcum, New Hampshire.

High jump—Adam Berry, Southern University; Forrester Greene, Southern California; Pete Watkins, Texas A. and M.

Javelin throw—Robert Biles, California; Robert White, Army; Ed Wibbels, Nebraska.

Shot put—Al Blozis, Georgetown; Carl Merritt, Southern California; James Delaney, Notre Dame.

Discuss throw—Robert Fitch, Minnesota; Blozis, Georgetown; Robert Johnston, Ohio State.

Coach Laslie Quits V. M. I., Enters Service

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., June 15.—Carney G. Laslie, the second coach at Virginia Military Institute to be lost to the Navy, will report to Annapolis this week to start training under the Navy's physical fitness program.

Several weeks ago James E. Walker, end coach and head basketball mentor, joined the Navy's physical fitness program, and is now stationed at Athens, Ga.

Laslie came to Lexington in 1937 and served as director of physical education, football line coach and assistant in track. Prior to coming here he was head coach for three seasons at Blytheville (Ark.) High School and freshman coach for one year at the University of Alabama.

Lieut. Col. B. B. Clarkson, V. M. I. athletic director, said the positions left vacant would not be filled, and that Head Coach Pooley Hubert and Backfield Coach Russ Cohen would handle the coaching activities.

Another Virginia college coach, Riley Smith of Washington and Lee, has joined the Navy at Annapolis. Smith's successor has not been named. Cy Young, former member of the Generals' grid staff, has been mentioned as a probable successor to Smith, and will be recommended to the W. and L. athletic board at a meeting Tuesday night.

New York Yankees Volunteer Services In Civilian Defense

By the Associated Press

New York, June 15.—Members of the New York Yankees today signed up with the Bronx office of the Civilian Volunteer Defense Organizations for any work that officials desire of them.

As the first major league team to enlist as individuals in civilian defense volunteer work, the ball players will be available for service both while in New York and on the road, according to Mrs. Lillian Patterson, head of the Bronx office.

The players' signatures were obtained by Mrs. William Dickey, wife of the Yankees' first string catcher. Mrs. Gerald Priddy, wife of the club's utility infielder, also works in the same office.

Hale America Golfers 'Feel' Way Around Ridgemoor Links

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 15.—The Nation's golfing stars began to explore the Ridgemoor Country Club's bottleneck fairways and ledged sand traps today—a layout they'll get to know far better in the four-day Hale America National Open starting Thursday.

A number of the 108 players entered brushed up their swings, but the bulk will take to the links tomorrow in the two-day practice period. Among them will be the professionals who competed in the Inverness Invitational which ended in Toledo, Ohio yesterday, and Bobby Jones, famed Georgian. Jones will be making his first appearance in medal play competition, aside from his annual participation in the Master's Tournament, since his 1930 grand slam.

In addition to the tournament proper, Jones will engage in an exhibition match with Bob Hope of Hollywood and the radio on Wednesday afternoon. Jones, at the age of 40, will be happy if he makes a respectable finish, perhaps within the first ten. He made a splendid showing in the Atlanta trials by scoring rounds of 67, 71 and 69 for a 54 hole total of 207. However, he was under no pressure since he was exempted from the preliminary qualifying rounds for the tournament.

The Hale America, golf's chief contribution to the 1942 war effort, offers Chicagoans one of the greatest shows the game has ever seen. Bing Crosby will be a contestant in the tournament, and driving contests and shot-making exhibitions will be given by the stars.

Net proceeds will be divided equally between the Navy Relief and the United Service organization. Howard Davis, Ridgemoor's pro, figures 50,000 will turn out for the four-day tournament and that $200,000 may be realized with tickets selling for $4.

Md. Fishermen Warned About Bass Season

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cumberland, Md., June 14.—Joseph A. Minke, regional game warden, noting that a number of fishermen have old pamphlets containing State laws in their possession, designating June 15 as the opening date, has called the attention of anglers to the fact that the 1942 bass season does not open until July 1.

The trout season, which opened April 15, will close July 15, overlapping the bass season by 15 days. Minke said that the trout season is good this year but there has been a scarcity of fishermen at isolated streams due to the gas rationing program.

Because of the gas rationing, Fulcher P. Smith of the Inland Game and Fish Commission has announced 2500 trout have been released this week in Evitt's Creek in Allegany County and Puzzley Run, near the Allegany line in Garrett County.

Smith said that since gasoline rationing is not effective in Garrett County, fishermen there can drive wherever they want to fish.

On the other hand, fishermen in Allegany County are limited in their gasoline purchasing and consequently must fish close to home.

The majority of the trout, Smith said, were released in Evitt's Creek.

George Voigt, cofavored with Pro Cliff Spencer for the Interdepartmental Golf League title which crowns the championship of the Government employes, was bothered by a lame arm yesterday and his score soared with the rest as more than half the eld completed play at Prince Georges.

Voigt, who was unable to complete his swing due to his arm injury, played 36 holes in 82 and 78 for a 160 total while Spencer was granted permission to play one round a day and posted a 38-36, 74, for his opening effort.

Coleaders with both rounds completed were W. C. Lawrence, G. P. O., and Joe Balestri, a former champion from the host club and also from G. P. O., with identical rounds of 78 and 79 for 157, 13 over par for the distance.

Voigt's 160 total trailed J. C. Wilmeth, Treasury, with 78-81, 159, and John Attas, a former Jersey amateur from the Navy Department, who required a pair of 80s for 160, far off his recent 68 form at Congressional.

The lw net leader was J. Horstkamp, FBI, with 83-85, 168-26, 142, while Henry Deel, WPA, was second with 84-82, 166-20, 146.

Tommy Webb and Billy Shea, of the FBI, will be among the low handicapped players shooting two rounds today. Spencer holds the whip hand with his opening 74 and anything near that today should earn the individual title. Team prizes will also be figured today.

Electric Nine Scores, 7 to 6, Over Marines

Western Electric won its first game in 10 starts in the Departmental League yesterday and did it right.

The Electrics scored six runs in the sixth and then went on to take a 7-6 contest from the Marines and all but eliminate the latter from the first half title chase.

Bill Stuart held the Marines to three singles and a double and successfully warded off rallies in the seventh and eighth which might have been disastrous. The game was played on the South Ellipse.

Jockey Sam Palumbo Steals Show as 'Victory Meet' Opens

Veteran Hits A 'Triple,' Wins Feature

Makes Charles Town 'Double' a Personal Affair as War Relief Racing Is Launched

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 15.—Jockey Sammy Palumbo, saddle king of the smaller tracks for years, gave three good exhibitions of riding here this afternoon as he won as many races. The Brooklyn (N. Y.) boy stole the show as the 18-day "all-out" victory meeting began under the leadership of the West Virginia Turf Fund Agency.

Palumbo made the daily double a personal proposition by riding the winners in both ends of the popular twin bet that paid a $39.60 mutuel. In the second race he rated Mrs. V. P. Noyes' Ecoway in good fashion and finally put the $5 favorite to a drive in the stretch that carried him to a length and a half victory over Don Dash with Sea Miss in third position.

He came back in the third event to engineer one of the strongest stretch moves of the meeting aboard Mrs. Thelma Brining's Mintsitka. This 4-year-old filly had only one horse beaten entering the stretch but Palumbo went to work and at the wire the filly was a head in advance of Sought After with Falconiere third in the blanket finish. Mintsitka paid $16.80.

In the sixth race, Palumbo had the mount on Edward Brining's Marandan and once again he put up a fine ride. Marandan was in the first flight from the start in the stretch, Marandan was urged out of the pack and went on in powerful fashion to win by a length and a half from Mrs. Norman E. Stanton's Butterman. Hiblaze was third in this field of eight going four and a half furlongs. Marandan paid $8.60.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

J. Yancey Christmas of Upper Marlboro, Md., took advantage of the blank day in the Delaware program and journeyed to Charles Town to inspect the horses he has here in care of C. A. Cranford. George Palmer, starter at Delaware Park, was a visitor. Palmer, who serves in like capacity at Dade Park, Henderson, Ky., came over to confer with T. C. Bradley, steward, representing the West Virginia Racing Commission here and presiding steward at Dade Park. George Cook, acting as agent for Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, former Belmont Park and Pimlico president, and now of the United States Navy, stated horses namely High Standard, Pathfinder, Tune Detective, Clove, Menotony, Down to Earth, Goldilocks, Hard Life, Conservatory, Press Box and Spare Room are for sale and can be inspected at Sagamore Farm, Glyndon, Md., or arrangements can be made through G. A. Cook. James Kent, a brother of O. F. Kent, former trainer of the Ewart Johnson horses, has been named as trainer of the Virginian's horses. O. F. Kent has been inducted into the United States Army. It has been announced by the West Virginia Turf Fund Agency that nine races will be listed on Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday. This program will obtain until the close of the meet on July 4. Jockey Martin Bletzacker was absent from the saddle yesterday for the reason that he was at his home in Somerset, Ohio, to spend the weekend with his parents. He plans to resume riding today. Trainer C. Wilkins succeeded J. Riddick as trainer of the horses owned by Mrs. Jean M. Reps. In the future horses owned by Mrs. A. J. La Coste will be trained by her husband. The string consists of Charmful, Sir Time and Broomoria. The plater Lorton owned by T. Flammia is being converted into a steeplechaser and will be prepared for such events at the forthcoming meeting at Cumberland, Md. I. C. Mourar has succeeded his son, E. Mourar, as trainer of the horses that race for Mrs. I. C. Mourar. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—DOCTOR POSEY is getting ready to win a race of this kind and I'm going to try to make this the right spot. HAPPY AM I has speed and belongs in the first flight. HARD GUY and SMOKE BALL are possibilities.

Second race—KATE SMITH jogged last week and should do the same in this company. CLOCKS had class once and will be close if in condition. TIME HER for the minor award.

Third race—CALOTTE could be the right one in this open affair. Likes the route and I'm going to string along. HIGH AIM is in excellent shape and belongs close. LADY JAFFA must be respected if taken off the reserve list.

Fourth race—SIGN BOARD has early foot and may get to the top and hold on for the main portion of this purse. SWEET MISS has a good race in the records and is a threat. DARTING STAR to take care of the others.

Fifth race—MY ONE gets in light in this sprint and promises to do a lot of running. IDA TIME has beaten as good as these and is a threat. CENTERVILLE may be along in time to be third.

Sixth race—Looks as if a fellow has to pick ROYAL BUSINESS in this. With a fast track under her, I see no reason for mistakes. BRAXTON will have to be caught from that inside post position. SHAILEEN for the show.

Seventh race—SCHLEY AL seems to have found the right spot in this distance event. Should take care of these eligibles without much trouble. SEPLIN has shown flashes of form and is dangerous. MOROCCO D will be a factor if in action.

Eighth race—YANKEE LAD may take the top on these and stay there. WORTHOWNING gets in light and belongs close. TELLEVANE to account for the show end.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take IN PORT, PARADING and ZAC PAM.

Baksi Stops Kenner in 5th At Stadium

Hanbury Beats Drew

The six-round semi-windup between Lew Hanbury, former Golden Glove star, and Preston Drew, another former amateur, drew the applause of the fans as they staged a good, clean and fast bout. Hanbury received the unanimous decision of Judges Bob Eller and Jimmy Sullivan and also Referee Bowen.

Hanbury, making his pro debut, showed much promise as he outboxed the other local lightweight. Drew, a willing mixer, was able to connect, but it was Hanbury who provided the best blows. He displayed an excellent left hand and at no time during the six-rounder did he show signs of greenness.

Hanbury weighed 134 and Drew 129.

In another scheduled six-rounder Gus Birman, former Columbus University light heavyweight, was knocked cold in the second round by George Parks of Greensboro, N. C., in 1:47 of the second stanza. Parks hit the local boy with four straight blows, the last a right which caught Mirman on the side of his head and sent him headlong onto the mat near Parks' corner.

Parks' victory snapped a six-fight win streak for Mirman. In the first round Mirman more than held his own, but in the next stanza he was smashed down for a seven-count and then for the full ten. Parks scaled 173½ and Mirman 179.

Preliminary Results

The card opened with Eddie Kane, former local Golden Glover, winning a decision over Leon Kennedy, colored boy of Allentown, Pa., in a four-rounder. Kane, making his fourth pro appearance, came on in the last two rounds for the margin of victory. Kane weighed 143, and Kennedy, 147.

In the second match on the supporting card, Roy Dunn, 160¼, scored a decision over Jimmy Hill, 159½, in a six-rounder. Dunn also came from behind for his triumph. Both boys were Washingtonians.

The third match, scheduled for six-rounds, went to Clinton Conway, tall colored light-heavyweight over Louie Jones of Washington in 1:25 in the second heat. Conway, a soldier-private, was a former amateur champion in Gotham and last night he showed Jones some of the guns that allowed him to win two amateur titles. Conway scaled 173 and Jones, 166½.

Giants Defeat Pirates Behind Schumacher's Hurling, 6-2

Babe Barna's Extra-Base Hitting Helps

Outfielder Pounds Out Double, Triple And Homer; Mel Ott Hits 8th Home Run

Associated Press Staff Writer

Pittsburgh, June 15.—With the help of Babe Barna's booming bat and Prince Hal Schumacher's air-tight elbowing, the New York Giants thumped the Pirates, 6 to 2, today to split their current series at two games each.

Barna knocked in one run in the fourth inning with a smashing triple and sent two more over in the ninth with his second homer of the year. He also helped a run-making rally in the eighth with a two-bagger. Schumacher handcuffed the Bucs with two hits for seven innings, then eased up and coasted in with a seven-hitter for his fourth victory of the season.

Altogether, the Giants tackled Max Butcher and Ken Heintzelham for an even dozen hits, among them Manager Mel Ott's eighth round-trip wallop of the campaign. This came in the ninth inning and, with Barna's belt, made it a gaudy three-run spree for the Giants in that session.

The Giants got off in front on singles by Mickey Witek and Bill Werber for a run in the third and were never headed. Barna's three-bagger, after Johnny Mize was safe on a fumble, added a run in the fourth and a single, Barna' double and another error made it 3 to 0 in the eighth before the Pirates came to life.

In the Buc half of the eighth, Ed Stewart opened with a pinch double and Elbie Fletcher whacked a two-bagger off the right field wall for a triple to send the only other Pittsburg tally across.

Turner Blanks Albany for Reds

Albany, N. Y., June 15 (AP).—Old Jim Turner pitched three-hit ball before 7620 fans tonight and the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Albany Eastern League Senators, 3-0, in an exhibition game.

Ben Drake and Norm Deweese singled and Ralph Kiner doubled for the only Albany blows while the Reds reached Jim Vance for eight hits.

The Reds scored twice in the fifth on an infield error, singles by Turner and Eddie Joost, Lonnie Frey's sacrifice and Max Marshall's outfield fly. Dick West tripled to open the seventh and counted on Turner's second single.

Mrs. Stokes, who is conceded a fine chance of regaining her crown, came in with the fourth best score, a consistent pair of 43s for an 86, while alone at 88 was Mrs. Arnold McNitt, a former Washington Post Cup Match Play Champion from Congressional who was pleased with one of her finest rounds over a championship course, a 46-42, 88.

Mrs. L. G. Pray, always a championship threat from Manor, was at 89 with three other 90-breakers, Mrs. L. B. Platt, of the host club, with 47 and 42 and Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, Woodmont, 46-43.

Mrs. Woodlief Thomas found herself in the playoff for the third consecutive year as the Kenwood player, Mrs. McCook Knox of the host club and Mrs. Gale E. Pugh, Manor tied for the last place in the first sixteen with scores of 94. Mrs. Pugh withdrew and Mrs. Thomas then lost the playoff for the first time as she required six strokes on the first hole to Mrs. Knox's five.

Host Professional Bob Barnett donated a pair of 400-hour candles to the prize list, purchased from the Belgian Relief Society, and Mrs. Walper won one for low gross and Mrs. McNitt the other for low net, an 88-13, 75.

Favorites Well Placed

The favored players are well spaced for the first round matches this morning. Mrs. Walper meets a former Virginian, Mrs. Helen Wise who was a tournament winner in the Tidewater section and qualified with a 90, while Mrs. Meckley goes against her usual playing partner, Mrs. A. A. McEntee, and Mrs. Stokes meets Mrs. G. H. Bailey, jr., of Washington.

Elizabeth Houghton, a former champion from the host club, was unable to return to the city in time to play and with Mrs. Myron Davy, the outstanding golfer of the city last year who is in California, made it two important names missing from the tournament. An unwieldy field of more than eight flights starts match play today, one which if not reduced in the future will find the local clubs closing the doors to the championship tournament.

Market Nine Beats Tavern, Tightens Race

The Center Market nine of the Post-Industrial League hopped right back into the rough battle for first half honors by defeating Little Tavern, 4-3, in 10 innings yesterday.

The Marketmen are now tied for the lead with Cameo Furniture with six victories and two losses apiece and each team has two games to play in the first half. The most important game for both is tomorrow when they play each other.

Market's Frank Watt and his opponent, Al Kimmel, both turned in creditable performances in the see-saw ball game. It was a couple of errors in the tenth inning that led to Tavern's defeat.

Both Moore and Watt were safe when Dansberger and Clarke bobbled grounders. Then, with two out, Mickey Finn singled and the winning run was over home plate on the South Ellipse diamond.

Today Cameo meets Mellanos Restaurant. Tomorrow comes the Cameo-Center Market tussle. And Thursday—if the game is needed — Center Market metes Heurich.

Satchel-Foot Paige's Former Batterymate Says Grays' Brown Will Upset Celebrated Pitcher

That Pitcher Ray Brown and the Washington Homestead Grays will upset Satchelfoot Paige and the Kansas City Monarchs in Thursday night's 9 o'clock intersectional baseball game at Griffith Stadium is predicted by Josh Gibson, powerful catcher of the Grays.

Gibson, Paige's battery mate over a long span of years who professes to know Satchelfoot better than any man living, believes that Brown's calmness under fire and smooth delivery will upset the brilliant, but relatively high strung, Paige.

"Ray will play along for the break, and when he gets his edge he'll hold it," Gibson cites. "Satchel seldom loses a ball game, but when he does lose one it's usually these calm, steady boys who beat him."

Although Brown and Paige played on rival Negro National League Clubs for several years prior to Satchelfoot's shift to the Negro American League they have never opposed previously. Several scheduled duels involving these stars previously were halted by unexpected late developments or conflicts.

Paige is to work the first six innings Thursday night after which Hilton Smith, hailed as the fastest pitcher in Negro baseball, will take over. Brown probably will go the distance for the Grays.

Entries Close Friday for Md. Women's Golf

Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, Washington women's chairman of the Maryland State Golf Association, announced last night that entries for next week's State championship at Baltimore's Country Club of Maryland (old Rodgers Forge) close Friday at noon. Mrs. Payne will take the names at ADams 4489.

The women's committee deliberated over canceling the tournament but finally decided to go ahead with the annual affair as the Baltimore players were anxious to compete and a representative delegation was promised from Washington clubs.

The championship starts next Tuesday, June 23.

Post entries will be accepted and will follow the field. Washingtonians have been provided with preferred starting times of between 10 and 11 a. m.

Two other championship tournaments next week include the Maryland State amateur at Baltimore's Five Farms Thursday through Saturday and the District junior championship Tuesday at Washington Golf and Country Club. Dr. W. C. Barr is accepting entries for the latter event at the host club until Saturday at 6 p. m.

War Building Pace Exceeds Billion a Month

War construction now is proceeding at a rate of about $12,500,000,000 a year, the War Production Board estimated yesterday, while nonessential civilian construction virtually has halted completely.

Further increases in building are expected to cause essential construction to top $13,500,000,000 by the year's end, or 20 per cent above the 1941 total for all construction, which set an all-time record.

All but 22 per cent of construction put in place through mid-June was for airfields, war plants, shipyards, camps, war housing and the like, WPB said.

Nonessential civilian building, which approximated four billion dollars last year, will aggregate less than 650 million dollars for 1941, it was estimated, and in the first three months of this year totaled about 215 million dollars.

Extension of facilities, which the company seeks to operate on a three-shift daily basis, necessitated the call for additional workers, a spokesman said.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 15 (AP).—Early gains of almost a cent a bushel in wheat prices, more than a cent in rye and better than 2 cents in soybeans were reduced or wiped out before the closing bell today.

Buying touched off at the opening bell gave the market its strong early advance, but when this subsided prices reacted and in late dealings fell to fractional net losses in some cases. Hedging sales and profit taking accounted for most of the late pressure. Reports of wet weather delays to wheat harvest and of lend-lease purchase of 22,000 barrels of rye flour for Russia stimulated early buying.

Wheat closed unchanged to ¼ lower compared with Saturday; July, 1.18⅞; September, 1.21¼@1.21⅛. Corn unchanged to ⅛ higher; July, 86@86⅛; September, 88¾@88⅞. Oats ⅛ off to ¼ up. Soybeans, 1 to 1¾ higher. Rye, ⅜ to ⅝ lower.

U. S. Population Shift Declared Greatest on Record

New York, June 15 (AP).—The war effort has brought the greatest shifting of population in the country's history, said today's issue of the Index, published by the New York Trust Co.

Early in 1941, before the United States entered the war, the number of such migrants was estimated at upwards of five million and the number has been increased vastly since then, said the publication.

"While every major geographical area has experienced this war migration, the interstate and Nation-wide flow of population has been largely into New England, the Middle West and the Great Lakes industrial areas and the Pacific Coast States," said the Index.

Some shifting of industry also has resulted, but on a smaller scale, largely because of a recent tendency toward decentralization under which war plants have been located in the Mississippi Valley and other sections, said the review.

Texas Oil Man Seeks To Build 22 Barges

Houston, Tex., June 15 (AP).—Walter C. Dodd, Houston oil operator, and a group of associates have filed an application with the War Production Board for authority to build 22 steel barges, representing an investment of $700,000, for the movement of crude oil and gas between Southeast Texas and Pittsburgh, they said today.

The barges, with a capacity of 10,000 barrels each, would operate between Corpus Christi and New Orleans and Pittsburgh on the Intracoastal Canal and the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers.

Frisco's Equipment Issue Approved

St. Louis, June 15 (AP).—The St. Louis-San Francisco (Frisco) Railway was authorized today by Federal Judge George W. Moore to sell $2,120,000 in equipment trust certificates to finance the construction of 15 new freight locomotives.

He said also that he did not wish to be reelected at the forthcoming annual meeting of stockholders.

He has also advised his board of directors that while he had been contemplating such ation for some time, he would be willing to go along as at present until the annual meeting of stockholders, providing this meeting was not to be unduly delayed," the statement said. Buying Flurry in Air Transport Shares Steadies Market After Early Irregularity

New York, June 15.—Late bids for air transports steadied the stock market today after considerable early hesitancy.

The list shifted in irregular fractions at the start. Selective improvement cropped up in the wake of the flurry in the aviations. Gold mine issues also were given a last-minute push. Closing advances of fractions to a point or more were well distributed, although many leaders were about even to a shade under water.

A little short covering and new buying in the tail end of the session was attributed partly to the belief drying up of offerings indicated the market might be ready to resume the rally interrupted by last week's profit-taking decline. The war news provided nothing much in the way of bullish incentives.

Moderately revived demand for the aviations, mines and other peacetime favorites, brokers suggested, was based largely on what they referred to as the long-pull outlook rather than any idea the world conflict would come to a quick finish.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .1 of a point at 35.7. Transfers of 262,840 shares compared with 220,220 last Friday. Of 552 individual stocks traded—less than half the number listed on the exchange—237 were up, 156 down and 159 unchanged.

American Airlines was up 2¼ points at one time and finished with a net gain of 1⅝. Homestake Mining jumped 2½ and Dome Mines was up ¾. Modest plus marks were retained by Eastern Air Lines, United Air Lines, United States Steel, General Motors, American Telephone, Great Northern, Eastman Kodak, Philip Morris, Anaconda, Westinghouse and Standard Oil (N. J.).

Shares in the losing class included Santa Fe, United States Rubber, Du Pont, Boeing, Johns-Manville and Consolidated Edison.

Bonds were mixed and commodities shaky. At Chicago wheat and corn were unchanged to off ¼ and up ⅛ of a cent a bushel, respectively. Hogs were up 10 to 15 cents. Cotton lost 85 cents to $1.05 a bale.

Tilting forward in the Curb were Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, up about 3; American Gas, Humble Oil, Sherwin Williams and New Jersey Zinc. Turnover here amounted to 34,104 shares versus 36,925 in the previous five-hour stretch.

Trailer Builders Step Up Output To 50,000 Units

Chicago, June 15 (AP).—The Nation's trailer builders set their sights today on a production goal of 50,000 units in 1942, more than four times the peacetime output of 12,000 units in 1940.

A spokesman for the Trailer Coach Manufacturers Association, meeting here, said that since the industry converted to defense work last year the entire output is going to two markets—Government orders and purchases by individual war workers.

Secretary Richard M. McClure said that only recently the Farm Security Administration, handling trailer housing under War Department directives, contracted with various manufacturers to produce 1600 trailer units in 30 days for installation at war plant sites.

McClure said that about 19,000 trailer units were on the present war-housing program.

New York, June 15 (AP).—Visible supply of American grain showed the following changes from a week ago, in bushels: Wheat decreased 1,301,000, corn decreased 1,157,000, oats decreased 392,000, rye increased 37,000 and barley decreased 308,000.

Steel Rate Drop In Week Laid to Overdue Repairs

New York, June 15 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today steel mills would operate this week at 98.3 per cent of capacity, equivalent to production of 1,669,700 tons of ingots and a decline from 99.3 per cent a week ago.

While there was no official reason given for the decine, sharpest in weeks, steel observers pointed out that the recent high rates of operation meant added strains on facilities and that repairs might have been overdue in some cases.

Operations a week ago at 99.3 per cent of capacity indicated production of 1,686,700 tons of ingots. A month ago the rate was 99.2 for 1,685,000 for an output of 1,685,000 tons and a year ago 99 per cent of a smaller capacity for 1,597,800 tons.

Drop Is Noted In Wholesale Food Prices

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 15.—The war-inspired agricultural price rise and the almost uninterrupted advance in wholesale food costs since before Pearl Harbor have definitely been halted, at least for the time being, market statistics showed today.

Although farm commodities are exempt from blanket ceilings placed on most processed food costs to consumers, market prices now have retreated from 1942 highs in the case of all major products.

They are still well above year ago levels, however, and experts said this fact, coupled with greatly increased wartime farm production, virtually assures agriculture of near record cash income this year. Preliminary forecasts indicate marketings will yield farmers about two billion dollars more than the 11 billion dollars plus income they received in 1941. During the first quarter of 1942 cash farm income was 47 per cent greater than a year ago. Largest income on record was $14,600,000,000 in 1919; the smallest since then, less than five billion dollars in 1932.

Various Factors Cited

Price ceilings as of March highs, which went into effect last month on most food costs in retail and wholesale trade, directly or indirectly affect farm commodities to varying degrees, experts said, some foods, however, such as eggs and poultry, milk products, flour, mutton and lamb, are exempt even in wholesale and retail trade.

Various developments other than price control have had important influence in causing certain commodities to back down from 1942 highs, which, in most cases, were tops for the past several years. For example, excellent crop weather, generally speaking, with near-record harvests in prospect and large carryover supplies on hand, have helped to depress grains. Butter and eggs have been affected by large supplies coming to market as producers swing into the greatly expanded war production program. This is normally the season for flush production of these commodities. Trade authorities said ceilings on beef and pork have directly affected farmers' markets for cattle and hogs.

Food Prices Compared

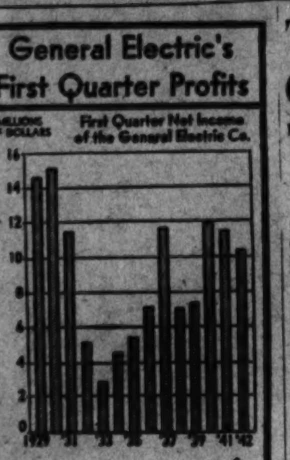

The following table of approximate Chicago prices, for comparative purposes only, reflects the agricultural price situation:

	Present.	1942.	High Year Ago.	World War I Peak.
Wheat, bu.	$1.19	1.35	1.02	3.50
Corn, bu.	.86	.93	.73	2.36
Oats, bu.	.49	.60	.36	1.29
Rye, bu.	.65	.96	.56	2.95
Hogs, lb.	.14¼	.14⅝	.10	.22

Cattle, lb.	.13	.13½	.10¾	.16
Eggs, doz.	.31	.37	.25	.73

Wholesale food prices have backed down slightly from the 23-year peak reached at mid-May. The latest Dun & Bradstreet index representing the price per pound of 31 foods was $3.66 compared with a high of $3.69 May 19, $3.33 just before Pearl Harbor and $2.97 a year ago.

Consent Decree Ends Priority Case Against J. & L.

Pittsburgh, June 15 (AP).—Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker today issued a consent decree directing the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation to comply with all priority regulations of the War Production Board.

The WPB on April 20 had charged the corporation with "repeated, deliberate violations" of priorities regulations, claiming it had accepted lower rated and civilian orders for steel products while refusing to accept or make delivery under high-rated military orders.

In consenting to the decree, Jones & Laughlin reiterated its denial that it had violated "regulations orders or directions" of the WPB. Former Allegheny County Judge Elder W. Marshall, counsel for J. & L., said the corporation had been "rigidly adhering to priorities" regulations, adding:

"With the tremendous united effort the war requires from every one of us, the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation is, unwilling to with the Government about priengage further in any controversy orities."

The courts order noted that John Lord O'Brian, counsel for the WPB, had said the Government "has made no charge, no intimation that the defendant concern was guilty of any lack of patriotism."

'5 and 10' Sales At Record Rate

New York, June 15 (AP).—The Syndicate Store Merchandiser, trade magazine of the 5 and 10 cent to $1 variety store field, reported today that for the fifth consecutive month "5 and 10" sales continued at an unprecedented level in May.

In the face of what it called a general-down trend in retail trade, the publication said the nickel and dime store sales advanced slightly and to within a fraction of their all-time peak.

Total May sales by 12 of the leading syndicates were $96,588,708, a gain of 10.6 per cent over May, 1941. For the year to date sales totaled $435,129,180, or 17.1 per cent ahead of 1941.

Thomas Lays Cotton Slump To Bear Raids

By the Associated Press

Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Oklahoma declared last night that an organized bear raid upon cotton prices had caused a decline of approximately $10 a bale and a loss of 100 million dollars on the 10 million bales in storage.

In a statement he said that a special Senate committee which he heads is investigating an alleged program to depress farm prices. He said the committee had received a complaint stating that a market forecasting service in New York City had advised clients on May 27 to sell October cotton futures and keep all short positions intact until October cotton sold below 18 cents a pound.

"At the time the notice and advice was sent out," Thomas said, "October futures were selling around 19.50 cents a pound and immediately a short selling wave started and did not end until the advertised objective had been reached.

"This organized bear raid upon cotton farm prices caused a decline of some $10 per bale and a loss on the 10 million bales in storage of some 100 million dollars. The estimated loss on the Government stocks of cotton alone amounted to almost one-half that amount."

Thomas also said that farmers were complaining that they were being discriminated against in that the prices of their products were being kept below parity with wages and the products of industry. Complaints were general, he declared, that the law regarding price ceilings on commodities was being "disregarded, if not violated."

New York Cotton

New York, June 15 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 85 cents to $1.05 a bale lower today after wide price fluctuations on a small volume of tradings.

A sudden withdrawal of trade buyers overturned efforts to continue the advancing tendencies under way last week. When the trade demand failed to broaden, New Orleans interests turned to selling.

Contract Bridge

"Your opinion on this bridge problem will be greatly appreciated," writes a group of Long Island City, Queens, bridge players who call themselves "An Anxious Bridge Foursome." The question concerns the proper defense of today's deal, played by North at five clubs.

Today's Hand

NORTH DEALER

North: ♠10 8 4; ♡5; ♢A Q 8 2; ♣A Q 8 7 5
West: ♠A Q 3; ♡A 7 6 4 2; ♢6 3; ♣J 9 4
East: ♠K J 9 7 5; ♡J; ♢10 9 5 4; ♣10 3 2
South: ♠6 2; ♡K Q 10 9 8 3; ♢K J 7; ♣K 6

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	1♡	Pass
2♢	Pass	3♡	Pass
4♣	Pass	5♣	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: J ♡.

"The bridge hand in question took place at our weekly rubber-bridge foursome," they continue. "Opinion is divided, and the arguments have been quite heated. It was the last rubber of the evening and we admit that the bidding was optimistic and the double unsound; but the controversy is about the defense.

"The heart jack was led, covered by the king and taken by the ace. A small heart was returned and North discarded a spade. East trumping low. East then returned a low diamond and North proceeded to make the hand by removing trumps and discarding the losing spades on the good hearts.

"We each have our reasons for playing as we did, but we want the proper defense (not double dummy). It is very evident, of course, that the bid should have been set badly."

The defense was good up until East switched to a diamond instead of a spade. With a spade lead, West will win, cash another spade trick and lead another heart. If declarer trumps high he will lose a trump trick later. If he trumps low or discards, East will make another low club. The defenders will take two spades, one heart and two heart ruffs for a set of three tricks.

East must be blamed for leading a diamond. Since North bid that suit, he is likely to have high cards in it, and West's doubling values must be in spades. Despite the fact that East holds king-jack of the suit, a spade switch is marked, and East might as well be brave about it and lead the king.

The hand plays well at hearts. Although game should not be bid, it can be made on the unusual distribution.

North made a mistake in saying two diamonds. His hand is too puny to change suits. The bidding might go like this:

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	1♡	Pass
2♣	Pass	2♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

South will not get so enthusiastic if North refrains from "reverse" bidding.

At hearts West probably will open a diamond, not knowing the spade situation; declarer will win and play the king of hearts, continuing the suit until West takes or is left with the ace. West can cash two rounds of spades, but South will trump the third lead and claim the balance for four-odd, losing two spades and a heart. The play works out the same way with a spade opening.

Eye Operation Recommended for President Ortiz

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Buenos Aires, June 15.—The Buenos Aires newspaper, Critica, said tonight it understood the New York eye surgeon, Ramon Castroviejo, would recommend an operation to restore the sight of President Roberto M. Ortiz.

Dr. Castroviejo has had the President under observation for the last four weeks. He is at present drafting the report of his conclusions for submission to the President and to his Argentine physicians, probably Wednesday night or Thursday.

President Ortiz's general health was reported to be good at present, and most informed circles believe that a successful eye operation would enable the liberal leader to return to the office he was forced to turn over to Acting President Ramon S. Castillo nearly two years ago because of illness.

IN MEMORIAM

CARMICHAEL, LLOYD EMERSON. In sad but lonely remembrance of our darling boy, LLOYD EMERSON CARMICHAEL, who departed this life suddenly one year ago today, June 16, 1941.

It is lonely without you here,
And sad alone life's way.
Life does not seem the same
Since you have gone away.
We miss your sweet smiling face,
Our hearts still ache for you.
God alone knows how we miss you.
Gone are the steps we loved so dear,
Silence the voice we used to hear,
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thoughts to reach.

Father, Mother and Brothers
Alonzo and Rowland Carmichael.

What kind of men are American soldiers up against?

"The Nature of the Enemy" is the title of a new series to be heard over WJSV and the Columbia Broadcasting System every Tuesday night at 8:30, starting tonight, attempting to answer that question by dramatizing the records of cruelty and treachery of Axis leaders.

Franz Von Papen, at present Hitler's Ambassador to Turkey, is the subject of the opening broadcast. The program shows how this man developed the practice of deceit which he first revealed to America during World War I into a mountain of enmity for this country.

Next comes the story of Paul Joseph Goebbels, father of German lies. Admiral Isoraku Yamamoto, model of treachery for millions of Japanese, is the third of the Axis leaders to have his record depicted. His story is followed by that of Alfred Rosenberg, philosopher of the Nazi creed and gauleiter of German-occupied Russia.

Charles Vanda is to produce and direct the new series. Vanda is responsible for the CBS broadcasts of "They Live Forever," which conclude June 7 and which have recounted the heroic deaths of many American heroes since December 7. Describing the kind of enemies who killed those American service men is Vanda's new problem in "The Nature of the Enemy."

The Post Radio Highlights

10:30 a. m., WINX—"Victory Starts at Home" follows up on the nurse situation in Washington. Guest today is Mrs. Walter Lippman, wife of the well known columnist and national director of the Nurses Aide Corps.

8:30 p. m., WJSV—"The Nature of the Enemy," new series which lays bare the cruelties and treacheries of Axis leaders, opens with a dramatization of the criminal career of Franz von Papen. The program is presented to reveal the kinds of men American soldiers are fighting.

8:30 p. m., WMAL—"Soldiers of God." Story of chaplains serving with our armed forces with William Holden and Jeffrey Lynn, former movie stars now serving with the Signal Corps.
